Marshall Plan ... By France and Britain Over Red Objections

Conference Slated To Close Today In Atmosphere of Total Disagreement

By Joseph E. Dynan

Paris, June 30 (AP).—French sources predicted tonight that the British, French and Russian conference on the Marshall plan for economic aid to Europe would end tomorrow and that the plan would be put in operation by Britain and France without Russian participation.

The session tomorrow was scheduled, they said, for British and French replies to a last-minute proposal from Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov which both British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Georges Bidault termed unacceptable.

The statement came from French quarters after the conference's third session had ended in complete disagreement between the British and French on one side and the Russians on the other.

Bevin was quoted by one French official as saying "the case is hopeless."

Bidault, this same source reported, said he could not accept Russia's proposals because of instructions from the French government.

Both Bevin and Bidault, however, agreed to consider the Russian proposals further and to bring their replies to tomorrow's session.

Approval by the present French non-Communist government of proceeding with the Marshall plan without Russian participation was taken for granted by political observers here.

Bevin called the Russian proposals equivalent to "asking the United States for a blank check."

(At Washington, British Ambassador Lord Inverchapel discussed the conference with Secretary of State George Marshall for 40 minutes today.

Inverchapel told reporters he and the Secretary had talked "along broad lines." He added: "Our views are substantially the same.")

The chief point of difference appeared to be that Molotov contended the conference should set up committees to determine only how much help should be asked from the United States, while Bevin and Bidault believe a comprehensive program for use of such help should be presented.

A British informant, lifting a news blackout to disclose Bevin's stand, said the third session of the conference ended in complete disagreement.

The British source said that Bevin asked Molotov:

"How would the Soviet Union like it if she were asked for a blank check?"

Bevin Asks 4-Year Plan

Bevin said he was convinced that the Russian proposals would be unacceptable to the United States. He called for immediate appointment of a steering committee to complete by August 15 a four-year plan of European reconstruction for submission to the cooperating governments.

Spain was expressly barred from any participation, under the British proposal.

The conference recessed after a three-hour session, described by the informant as "crucial."

The British spokesman said he was lifting the news ban, which had been in effect since the conference convened last Friday, because his delegation felt that the Russians had violated the blackout yesterday, in a dispatch distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass.

The Tass article, an official account of the Russian viewpoint, said the Soviets opposed any all-embracing economic plan for Europe and believed that the scope

Austerity Program Set

Ration-Weary Britons Face New Curbs on Many Articles

London, June 30 (U.P.).—Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton today outlined a new austerity program which will cut British tobacco, food, clothing and gasoline rations for the coming 12 months. It also will reduce imports of tobacco, gasoline and newsprint.

Dalton told the Commons greater austerity than ever before was necessary to conserve Britain's dwindling dollar supply for food, raw materials and machinery.

"Owing to the serious rise in world prices of food and raw materials, and to the disappointingly slow rate of postwar recovery both in Europe and Asia, a severe shortage of dollars is making itself felt in almost all parts of the world," Dalton said.

"In particular, our own line of credit under the Anglo-American loan agreement is being drawn upon much more rapidly than we expected. It is our clear duty to take further steps to close the gap between our necessary imports and our exports, particularly to hard currency areas."

Dalton drew this austere picture for ration-weary Britons:

Food—The government will maintain food imports and even increase slightly imports of certain types of food. However, supply shortages may restrict imports of some foods and possible cuts, including rationed foods, cannot be ruled out.

Tobacco—There will be a substantial reduction in tobacco imports.

Gasoline—Imports will be reduced and gasoline allocation to the armed forces and for commercial purposes must be restricted.

Newsprint—Some restrictions in newsprint supplies is inevitable, and newspapers again must be reduced to four pages.

Films—Dalton asked for a levy on imported films "to economize foreign exchange further, if necessary."

Textiles—Exports will be increased. Dalton said British consumers would suffer unless textile workers made an "exceptional effort" to increase production sufficiently to make up for the jump in exports.

Senators Call Young To Explain 'Pocketed' D. C. Police Reports

Commissioner Says Probe of Situation Exposed by The Post Will Begin at Once

By Robert Bruskin and N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporters

District Commissioner John Russell Young was asked yesterday to appear before the Senate District Committee to explain widespread "pocketing" of crime complaints by police, as uncovered by a Washington Post investigation.

Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.), of the Senate Committee, said he found members "as surprised as everyone is" at the state of affairs uncovered in The Post's probe. He said a meeting would be held after July 4 to determine "how this may have happened."

After conferring with Chief of Detectives Robert J. Barrett, who is to become Superintendent of Police today, Young said an investigation would begin immediately. The Post disclosed Sunday that 600 robbery reports were withheld from police statistics in 11 months—at least 300 of which were marked "hold" in the precints and at least 300 held in secret detective bureau files.

Has Confidence in Barrett

"If any abuse in the use of discretion by detectives and police is found, it certainly will be corrected," Young said. "If the investigation shows any chaotic condition exists in the Police Department, or any other type of abuse in reporting crimes as required by regulations, The Post will have done a great service to us."

And, he added:

"Knowing what Barrett did in the District of Columbia, I feel very confident he won't need any urging to place the entire Metropolitan Police Department in the same efficient condition he left the Detective Bureau."

Inspector Barrett said yesterday he had assigned Capt. Robert S. Bryant, assistant chief of detectives, and Lieut. Robert V. Murray, chief of the robbery squad, to commence investigations on the "pocketed" cases.

Barrett said that immediately after Inspector Floyd Truscott succeeds him as Chief of Detectives today, Truscott would have full charge of the entire investigations.

Meanwhile, it was learned, police were working feverishly to clean up their records of cases "held" at the request of the Detective Bureau and precinct detectives. The work was being carried on without written instructions or acknowledged oral instructions from higher headquarters.

Appointment Bill Introduced

To remove the power of appointing police chiefs by the District Commissioners, Senator J. Howard McGrath (D., R. I.) yesterday introduced a bill providing for appointment by the President, and confirmation by the Senate.

It called for appointments from among members of the Metropolitan Police or other sources.

"The bill is not aimed at Inspector Barrett," said Senator McGrath. "I think we will have a better superintendent if responsibility runs directly to the President since the District Commissioners are really not responsible to anyone after being appointed for a term."

He recomended extensive public hearings so that citizens and civic associations might weigh the bill carefully and determine "if it will make for a better police department."

"Startling" to Beall

Senator Buck earlier, declared that he thought it necessary that the Senate concur in all appointments of police superintendents for the District. These appointments "are terribly difficult," he said.

Senator Buck said he would favor the McGrath bill if it were changed to include the superintendents of Park and White House police.

Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill) of the House District Committee said he would listen favorably to a request for congressional airing of the "pocketed" cases by "any official group of

Agencies Ponder Payrolls

Eleven Money Bills Unpassed As Federal Fiscal Year Ends

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The House yesterday clashed with the Senate over what to do about a money bill log-jam, as Congress crossed the fiscal year deadline with eleven unpassed bills.

As Government agencies pondered how to meet payrolls, House Republicans balked at a Senate-passed resolution giving Federal units blanket authority to carry on as usual until Congress pays the bill.

Instead, House Appropriations Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) rushed through the House a limited resolution carrying no general payroll provisions, but averting interruption of the flow of veterans' benefits and other programs in year-end jeopardy.

The Taber resolution also authorized temporary continuance of the Office of Government Reports and other agencies slated to be abolished because the House shut off their funds.

Taber told newsmen there was no need to provide general payroll authority since salaries in most agencies can be met with existing funds until July 20. He predicted all of the 11 unenacted money bills will be law by that time.

Following a hurried conference with Taber, Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) asked the Senate to reconsider the blanket Senate resolution.

This had the effect of temporarily holding up the Senate's "continuing" resolution until the full Senate Appropriations Committee can confer on the deadlock today.

A partsan row meanwhile broke out on both sides of the Capitol, as Democrats needled the GOP high command on what representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) termed the worst money bill tie-up "since the days of George Washington."

House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck (Ind.) mixed into the row to charge President Truman and House Democrats with "stubborn resistance" to all proposed cuts.

Taber and Representative Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) blamed Reorganization Act delays for the tie-up, but claimed the GOP record

French Report Revolution Plot Thwarted

Right-Wing Leaders And Army Men Said To Be Implicated

Paris, June 30 (AP).—France announced today that her secret police had thwarted a sensational plot by a right-wing underground organization calling itself the "Black Maquis" to overthrow the Fourth Republic in a civil war next month and establish a military dictatorship.

Existence of the Black Maquis was disclosed by Interior Minister Edouard Depreux. The minister described the organization as "very widespread," and said that noted resistance leaders and "possibly part of the French army" were implicated. At least six persons have been arrested, he said, including General Guillaudot, inspector general of the National Gendarmerie.

Depreux declared at a news conference that the Black Maquis was made up of right-wing resistance leaders, monarchists and Vichy collaborators, who had drawn up a "blue plan" of military action which called for a march on Paris by armored units. "The Maquis" was the term commonly applied to the French underground fighters against the Nazis.

Former Petain Aide Involved

Political observers immediately recalled the "Cagoulard" (hooded ones) plot against the Third Republic in 1936 and 1937, which also occurred when the government was plagued with social unrest.

One of the final arrests of those implicated in the Black Maquis plot, Depreux said, was Maj. Jean-Georges Loustauneau-Lacau, well-known resistance leader, who admittedly belonged to the "Cagoulards," an anti-Leftist organization.

The newspaper France Soir said Loustauneau-Lacau was an aide to former Marshal Petain in 1934, when Petain was war minister. The newspaper added that Loustauneau-Lacau also held a minor position in Petain's Vichy government, but at the same time organized a resistance group and was imprisoned.

Truman Signs Rent Measure But Blasts It

Calls It 'the Lesser Of Two Evils'; Asks Realty Lobby Probe

(Message Text on Page 7)

Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday signed the modified Rent Control Act but denounced it in a stinging message to Congress as "plainly inadequate."

The Chief Executive said he signed the measure only because it is "the lesser of two evils," since Congress had made it plain it was this bill or no rent control at all.

Mr. Truman, who was chairman of the National Defense Investigating Committee when he served in the Senate, called upon Congress to investigate the real estate lobby, which, he said, "has displayed a ruthless disregard of the public welfare" in blocking any constructive housing program.

The President's sizzling attack upon the measure which he signed into law under protest evoked mixed reaction on Capitol Hill.

Veto Seen as "Natural"

On the Senate side one Republican leader commented that the Rent Control Act would have been "a natural" for President Truman to veto.

This GOP leader was convinced Congress would have been compelled to take action to continue rent control anyway, if the President had vetoed this bill.

House Majority Leader Charles Halleck (R., Ind.) angrily accused President Truman of attacking the honesty of members of Congress. He called the message "shameful" and added that "Mr. Truman has reached a new low in his efforts to appease the Wallace gang and hold their support for the election in 1948."

The new law, effective today, has the following major provisions:

1. Federal rent control is continued until March 1, 1948.

May Mutually Agree

2. Landlord and tenant may "mutually agree" to a rent increase up to 15 per cent on the

Md. Sales Tax Catches Stores Unlicensed

State Waives Legal Penalty as Deadline Falls for Collection

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Maryland's 50,000 retail dealers begin collecting a 2 per cent sales tax on almost all goods today as the Free State's first sales tax becomes effective.

About 24,000 of the merchants, still waiting for their licenses, were ordered to begin charging the levy even though a State regulation forbade collections without a license.

The head of the newly organized Maryland Retail Sales Tax Division, Walter E. Kennedy, announced late yesterday that if a dealer had shown "good faith" by applying for a license he would not be penalized for collecting the tax. Others would, he said.

The beginning of the sales tax collection coincides with the imposition of an additional 1-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline. The taxes mark the beginning of the new system of tax revenue in Maryland.

Three Revenue Sources

From now on the State will be supported by three revenue sources—income tax, alcoholic beverage imposts and the new sales tax—Chief Deputy Joseph O. McCusker pointed out in Annapolis.

McCusker said it was impossible to say now what the State surplus would be at the end of the fiscal year. It may exceed 14 million dollars, but Governor Lane already has committed more than that amount in his new budget.

Thousands of Maryland dealers suddenly became conscious of the law yesterday when they were warned about the approaching deadline. In Baltimore at the tax division headquarters, a block-long line continued throughout the day.

In Prince Georges County, Circuit Court Clerk Brice Bowie, after giving out about 1600 applications, ran out of forms about 3 p. m., leaving an estimated 1400 merchants without the required blanks for obtaining the $1 license.

In Montgomery County, Circuit Court Clerk Clayton K. Watkins distributed about 500 applications among 900 county merchants. Others obtained forms from Wil-

Operators Get Coal Pits Back Minus Miners

UMW Men Vacation As Flag Comes Down After 13 Months

By Harold W. Ward
Associated Press Reporter

The Government released the soft coal mines to their private owners yesterday and put the burden of avoiding another strike on John L. Lewis and the operators.

Because the miners are on vacation, the pits were as empty yesterday as they were 13 months ago when President Truman ordered them seized during a strike.

This strike had lasted seven weeks while Lewis and the operators fought over the terms of a new contract.

Flag Is Lowered

On May 29, 1946, Lewis and Secretary of Interior J. A. Krug signed an agreement at the White House and the miners streamed back to work for the Government.

The symbol of Federal operation—the American Flag over the mine openings—was lowered at the more than 2500 soft coal mines at 12:01 p. m. Washington time yesterday.

The Krug-Lewis contract went with it. Authority to run the mines expired at noon—six months after President Truman declared an end to hostilities of World War II, and thus relinquished his wartime authority to operate strike-bound mines or plants.

The present 10-day vacation in the mines began Saturday under terms of the Krug-Lewis agreement.

Each miner received $100 along with the holiday.

On Tuesday, July 8, the vacation will be over, and operators and miners must have reached a contract by that time in order to forestall another Nation-wide walkout.

Some Contracts Likely

Already 16,000 steel and railroad employes have been made idle by a growing coal shortage. Many miners jumped the gun on their vacation last week in protest against the Taft-Hartley labor law.

The possibility exists that agreements covering some mines may be made by Lewis and important sec-

House Passes Statehood Bill For Hawaii

Measure Adopted 196-133; Legislation Now Goes to Senate

By The Associated Press

The House passed yesterday a bill to grant Statehood to the Hawaiian Islands. It now goes to the Senate.

The vote was 196 to 133.

Action followed spirited debate which brought up objections because of Hawaii's distance from the mainland and its mixed racial complexion. Proponents contended "fair play" called for its admission.

Representative Sabath (D., Ill.) opposed Statehood, contending that five big sugar factors control the Territory's economy and it would be a "dangerous thing" to give them control of the State.

He told the House he favored the idea of giving people everywhere an opportunity to establish a free government. But, he said, "unfortunately conditions in Hawaii are controlled by the big-five organizations working jointly to control that island, including the production of sugar and pineapples."

"I know they haven't got the interest of the people that are living there at heart."

Knutson Raises CIO Question

Representative Brown (R., Ohio) favored the Statehood proposal, which he said has had "careful scrutiny" by congressional committees for 12 years without unfavorable action.

"Hawaii is fully capable of meeting all the financial obligations of Statehood," he said.

Representative Knutson (R., Minn.) suggested that the CIO is "firmly entranced" in Hawaii, and asked if Statehood would mean "two more CIO Senators."

Brown said he did not believe "the people of Hawaii would send two CIO Senators to Congress."

Action in the Senate at this session of Congress appears unlikely. Chairman Butler (R., Nebr.) said he wants his committee to give the bill "careful study" and that he does not intend to schedule hear-

29 Transfers Of Policemen Announced

Taking Helm Today, Barrett Shakes Up Many Precinct Heads

Twenty-nine shifts in Police Department personnel were announced yesterday by Inspector Robert A. Barrett, who is to be sworn in as major and superintendent today.

The changes, announced after a police heads' conference on Saturday and a meeting of Inspector Barrett with the District Commissioners yesterday, resulted largely from vacancies in precinct captaincies.

However, Barrett told reporters he was sending a "tougher" lieutenant, Ernest P. Myers, to the Seventh (Georgetown) Precinct.

Myers's transfer to No. 7 from No. 1 follows the suspension of three policemen in his new precinct, one of whom was fined $100 for admittedly drinking while on duty. The other two have charges against them stemming from the alleged beating of a Georgetown University student. Their case will be heard by the Police Trial Board July 18.

Barrett and Capt. Floyd A. Truscott, newly appointed chief of detective with the rank of inspector, will take the oath of office at 10 a. m. today in the Commissioners' office at the District Building.

Capt. Loraine T. Johnson, of the traffic division, who received his new rank last week, will command the Fifth Precinct, where Capt. John Flaherty recently retired.

Capt. John E. Fondahl, who has been head of No. 11, will be transferred to No. 8 and will be succeeded at No. 11 by Capt. James E. Silvea.

Capt. Arthur T. Bullock, Eighth Precinct commander, will head No. 13, succeeding Captain Truscott.

Other transfers, involving eight lieutenants, nine sergeants, one acting sergeant, five corporals and two privates, are:

Lieut. Charles J. Sullivan, Detective Bureau desk lieutenant, transferred to First Precinct.

Altar Stand-up Too Much

Bride-to-Be Changes Her Mind Once Too Often for Veteran

Chicago, June 30 (U.P.).—Peter Vasquez, 26, said today that a woman—no matter how penitent—could leave him at the altar only once.

He said it firmly, while his attractive bride-to-have-been sat beside him in his home and tearfully pleaded for another chance.

Vasquez was to have been married late yesterday to Miss Rosanna Peveri, 24, a brunette, who had come from London, England, to say "I do."

A large crowd had gathered at St. Francis Mission on Chicago's South Side for the wedding. Miss Peveri, shy and hesitant, wore a bridal gown. Vasquez, beaming, wore formal attire.

The priest came to the familiar words:

"Do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife?"

"I do," Vasquez replied.

The priest turned to the bride: "Do you take this man to be your lawful wedded husband?"

There was a long pause. Then came Miss Peveri's shocker:

"No, I can't go through with it. I'm homesick."

Vasquez didn't faint, but took Miss Perveri to his home for a weddingless reception. A six-piece dance orchestra greeted them but carefully avoided "Here Comes the Bride."

Vasquez and Miss Peveri danced until 5 a. m. this morning.

She wept—and changed her mind again. She said she wanted to get married today.

Vasquez said no. He said it was all right for a woman to change her mind, but not at the altar "at my wedding."

Vasquez met Miss Perveri in London when he was a private in the Quartermaster Corps and she was a waitress in a tea room.

Miss Perveri said she didn't know what she'd do if he didn't marry her.

Joint Letter to Congress

Four Agencies Ask Summary Firing Power for Security

By The Associated Press

The State, War and Navy Departments and the Atomic Energy Commission asked Congress yesterday for permanent authority to summarily fire any employe "in the interests of national security."

A letter to the House signed by Secretary of State Marshall, Secretary of War Patterson, acting Navy Secretary John L. Sullivan, and Commission Chairman David E. Lilienthal said:

"The national security demands that the greatest care must be exercised in retaining only tried and tested persons.

"Subversive action, working from within, can seriously jeopardize this security at a time when every means and precaution must be employed to steer the course of Government through its many intricate national and international activities."

The letter noted that President Truman's temporary Commission on Employe Loyalty recommended last fall that the three departments be given permanent power to remove civilian officers or employes promptly whenever loyalty is in doubt.

The purpose of the bill, the letter explained, "is to vest absolute discretionary authority" in the secretaries and chairman. Dismissal would not, however, preclude an employe from seeking employment elsewhere in the Government.

The departments asked that the bill be introduced and the request was referred to the Postoffice and Civil Service Committee.

Under its terms, the dismissing departments would not be required to tell a person why he or she was being fired. After 30 days, statements from the dismissed persons could be received, with the departments permitted to order reinstatement.

Any other Government office wishing to hire a person dismissed under these circumstances could do so only after consulting the head of the department which did the firing.

Capital Area People Hurt

B&O Columbian Leaves Rails At 78 M. P. H.; 8 Cars Upset

(From Wire Service Dispatches)

Westville, Ind., June 30.—A number of Washington area residents were injured when the Washington-bound B. & O. train, "The Columbian," traveling at 78 miles an hour, was derailed near here tonight.

Indiana State Police said no fatalities had been reported "as yet," but that doctors at the scene reported 30 stretcher cases, some in critical condition.

The injured included the following:

Mrs. Dale Murphy, Riverview Apts., 1201 N. Pitt st., Alexandria, Va., cuts, bruises and head injuries.

Her daughter, Linda, age 4, head injuries.

Miss Elizabeth Tyler, 21 of 1721 P st. nw., Washington, a Library of Congress employe, injuries undetermined.

Ethel Fadle, 1860 California st., Washington, contusions, possible back injuries.

Dr. Helen Strong, 2301 Cathedral ave., Washington, first aid treatment given.

Miss Tylor called friends in Washington tonight to let them know her injuries were not serious. She was returning to Washington from Champaign, Ill., her family home.

(Friends in Alexandria said Mrs. Murphy had called her family and said she was "all right."

(Both said the dining care of the train had suffered the most damage.)

The train, eastbound out of Chicago, left the tracks two miles south of here and 12 miles southwest of Michigan City at about 6:30 p. m., Central Daylight Time.

Police at the scene said the fourth car of the nine-car train struck "something" at a switch and

RFC Head Resigns; Truman Picks Hise

Loses USES

Labor Dept. Reorganizing Plan Beaten

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday killed President Truman's plan to reorganize the Labor Department, ignoring Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley's warning that the action would leave the Secretary of Labor little to do but collect statistics.

Mr. Truman had proposed that the United States Employment Service be placed permanently in the department and that the Wage-Hour Administration be made subject to control of the Labor Secretary.

But, by a vote of 42 to 40, the Senate agreed to a House-approved resolution rejecting this proposal. After the first roll call, the vote was tied, 41 to 41, but Senator George W. Malone (R., Nev.) switched to defeat the plan.

Goes to Social Security

As a result of the Senate action, the Labor Department, already stripped of the United States Conciliation Service by the Taft-Hartley Labor Law, loses control of USES to the Social Security Board.

Rejection of the plan also freezes with the Wage-Hour administrator authority to issue rules and regulations under the Wage-Hour Law. The plan would have transferred administrative functions of the Fair Labor Standards Act to Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach.

Administration of the Wage-Hour Law remains under the Labor Department "for housekeeping purposes," but the administrator, not Schwellenbach, will continue to have chief responsibility for its operation.

Ball Protests

The vote came after strong protests from Barkley and Senator Joseph H. Ball (R., Minn.). Barkley said the Secretary of Labor would be "practically reduced to collecting statistics."

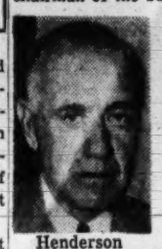
Ball recalled how the department had lost control of the Children's Bureau and is due to lose the Federal Conciliation Service. If this plan is killed, he said, the Labor Department would be left with the Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Women's Bureau "and very little else." He said that USES and wage-hour functions logically belonged in the department.

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.), however, attacked the plan because it "will not save one single dollar and will not dismiss one single employe."

Henderson Thanked By President for Delaying Departure

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday accepted "with reluctance" the resignation of Charles B. Henderson, chairman of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.



Henderson

Mr. Truman nominated Harley Hise of California to Henderson's place on the board. The five members name their own chairman. Henderson's resignation is effective when his successor qualifies. The Senate must approve a new member.

Henderson's term ran to next January 22.

The White House made public a letter in which President Truman said he had held Henderson's resignation in abeyance since he first expressed a desire to quit early in April.

The President's letter:

"Dear Mr. Henderson:

"When you wrote to me early in April, expressing your desire to resign as a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, I asked that you bear with me for the time being so that I might hold in abeyance the acceptance of your resignation.

"I have today approved S. J. Res. 135, joint resolution to extend the succession, lending powers, and the functions of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. and I do not feel that in fairness to you I can ask that you defer your request further. Therefore, with reluctance, I hereby accept your resignation as a member of the board of directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corp., effective upon the qualification of your successor. I am today submitting to the Senate the nomination of Honorable Harley Hise, of California.

"During your service with the Reconstruction Finance Corp. since 1941 as chairman—you have held a position of great importance in our economic life. Throughout this period you served our Nation faithfully and well and you deserve the sincere thanks and gratitude of your fellow countrymen.

"As you relinquish your duties, may I express the hope that you enjoy the rest earned in such full measure. You have my very best wishes for the years which lie ahead. "Very sincerely yours,

"HARRY S. TRUMAN."

House Passes Hawaii Bill

ings before Congress recesses late in July.

Even if the bill is not approved by the Senate at this session of Congress, it will not be dead. It will be carried over on the congressional agenda for Senate action at the next session.

Delegate Joseph R. Farrington (R., Hawaii), author of the bill, appealed to the House to approve it out of "a sense of fair play."

"Enactment of this bill will not mark the adoption of a new policy for this country," he said, "but will represent the fulfillment of a policy that had its inception in the adoption by the Congress of the Organic Act for Hawaii in 1900."

When Hawaii became a Territory of the United States, he said, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arizona were Territories.

"It was the belief of the people of Hawaiii then, and it has been their understanding through all the intervening years, that when they met all the requirements of State government, they, like other former Territories, would become a State."

As Farrington finished, he was congratulated by Representatives Keating (R., N. Y.) and MacKinnon (R., Minn.).

Republican leaders had placed a "must" tag on the legislation, first introduced in 1920. The measure has Administration approval.

Hawaii has been a Territory of the United States since April 30, 1900. Before that it was first a kingdom and then an independent republic.

Hawaii has a land area of 6438 square miles, slightly larger than the combined area of Connecticut and Rhode Island. Its population is estimated at 519,000, more than any other State at the time of admission except Oklahoma.

Congressional enactment of the Statehood bill would require the Governor of Hawaii, a presidential appointee, to order an election of delegates within 30 days to draft a State constitution.

The constitution would have to be ratified by the people of Hawaii in another election and approved by the President.

A third election then would be necessary to select a Governor, two Senators, two House members and other State officials to take office when the President admits the State of proclamation.

The last States admitted to the Union were New Mexico, January 6, 1912, and Arizona, February 14, 1912. Their admission followed congressional action by two years.

FBI Seeks Girl, Kin of Former Rep. Tolan

GRETA MARY GALE

Lee's Camp, Calif., June 30 (U.P.).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation today entered the search for Greta Mary (Toni) Gale, 2½-year-old granddaughter of a former U. S. Congressman.

The blond-haired child disappeared Sunday at 10 a. m. while playing near the summer home of her grandfather, John H. Tolan, of Oakland, Calif.

Tolan was Democratic Representative until he retired last year because of ill health.

He collapsed late yesterday of a heart attack while aiding a 100-man posse in the search for the child. Hospital officials said he was not expected to live.

The child's father, William Gale, jr., Assistant District Attorney of Alameda County, said she "wouldn't have just wandered away. I am very suspicious of kidnaping."

Edward Grant, fire control officer at Lassen Forest, said: "It definitely appears as though the child wandered off."

Bloodhounds failed to pick up a trail.

A year and a half ago, three-year-old Dickie Tum Suden, heir to a gold mining fortune, vanished from his parent's summer cabin 100 miles to the southwest of Lee's Camp.

No trace of Dickie ever was uncovered.

signing of a lease extending until December 31, 1948. If the tenant does not agree to an increase, the landlord may apply to the rent control board for an increase—as at present.

3. State Governors are to appoint local boards of five citizens for each Federal rent control area. These boards can, through recommendations to the area director, remove all rent controls in their areas if members see fit.

4. Government controls over non-residential building, except those over amusement or recreation projects such as theaters, bowling alleys and the like are removed. No permits will be necessary for industrial and store construction and the like.

5. Special eviction safeguards set up by OPA are removed and eviction cases are put back under State laws. In most cases, this means landlords may evict tenants for certain causes on 30 days' notice, instead of six months' notice. A landlord who wants to evict a tenant may go to court for an eviction notice. Evictions are permitted if tenant is immoral or maintains a nuisance, or if the landlord wants the property for his own use, wants to remodel or demolish it, or wants to sell it to somebody who wants to move in.

6. Eliminates rent controls on newly built, newly rented and newly remodeled dwellings and hotel accommodations.

for moving money bills was as good as the Democrats' own. Taber charged Cannon, while House Appropriations chairman, failed to make last year's deadline on 9 of the 12 regular bills.

In the Senate, Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) accused the Senate GOP leadership of "appeasing" and "kow-towing" to the House by holding up the Senate's own stop-gap money resolution. In other days, he said, the House "looked up" to the Senate.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.) joined the attack pointing out that at midnight only two Federal agencies—the Treasury and Postoffice Departments—would have any cash. He protested that most House fund bills reached the Senate "too late."

Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.), who pushed the blanket continuing resolution committee through the Senate last week, meanwhile called a meeting of his full Senate Appropriations Committee to discuss Taber's House move.

Taber is said to have protested that the Bridges resolution invaded House constitutional authority to originate all money bills.

Taber's substitute would assure temporary continuance, until the Senate has a chance to pass on House bills, of specific agencies the House voted to eliminate.

In addition, it gave the Veterans Administration specific authority to continue its veterans benefits and hospitalization programs during July. It voted the Agriculture department $5,350,000 to carry on its foot-and-mouth disease eradication program and sugar rationing authority during July.

First Surplus in 17 Years

Although the House has passed all but one of the 12 regular departmental measures, the Senate has passed only four and is now debating the fifth—State, Justice, Commerce and Labor. The Labor-Federal Security bill has been deadlocked in conference for weeks, with the Senate group fighting to restore House-cut funds for the Labor Department's conciliation service. Senate partial restoration of House-clipped reclamation funds threatens another major conference snarl on the Interior bill.

The Government meanwhile entered the new fiscal year with the first Treasury surplus in 17 years. Figures for all but the last five days showed the Treasury $1,142,925,000 in the black, with tax payments still coming in. But with a $500,000,000 interest payment due yesterday on the debt, the surplus may level off around $750,000,000.

U. S. Firms Reportedly Buy German Affiliate

Copenhagen, June 30 (AP).—The Copenhagen Coal & Coke Co., largest affiliate of the German Stinnes Co. in Denmark, was unofficially reported today to have passed to American ownership.

The new owners were identified as "some American finance firms," which prior to the war obtained an interest to the amount of $420,00 in the company.

United States State Department approval is needed to make the deal official.

'Gentiles Only' Signs Yield No Convictions

Miami Beach, Fla., June 30 (AP). Charges against four Miami Beach landlords, accusing them of displaying signs with the words "Gentiles only," "restricted," or "Gentiles" were dismissed in Municipal Court today on motion of the prosecution.

City Attorney Ben Shepard said the charges were framed too vaguely to sustain a prosecution.

Ideas Offered On Strength of World Police

Lake Success, June 30 (AP).—United States officers on the United Nations Military Staff Committee recommended tentatively today that the Security Council should have a basic force of 3800 warplanes, 20 divisions of ground troops, three battleships and six carriers to keep world peace.

Soviet members declined to make any suggestions. The Russians contended the 11-nation Security Council must agree on general principles for a world police force before getting down to actual numbers.

The U. S. delegation, headed by Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, submitted its ideas, along with those of France and Britain, in a report to the Council.

The tentative proposals were:

United States—1250 bombers, 2250 fighters, 300 miscellaneous planes, 20 divisions of ground troops (an American division is roughly 14,000 men at full strength), 3 battleships, 6 carriers, 15 cruisers, 84 destroyers, 90 submarines.

Britain (with China agreeing)—600 bombers, 400 fighters, 200 miscellaneous—total 1200 planes; 8 to 12 divisions, 2 battleships, 4 carriers, 6 cruisers, 24 destroyers, 48 escort vessels, 24 minesweepers, 12 submarines.

France—775 bombers, 300 fighters, 200 reconnaissance planes—total 1275 planes; 16 divisions (3 armored, 3 airborne, 10 motorized or mountain), 3 battleships, 6 carriers, 9 cruisers, 18 to 24 destroyers, 30 escort vessels, 30 minesweepers, 12 submarines.

The officers each made it clear his statement did not commit his government.

The Council adjourned at 6:30 p. m. It will meet tomorrow on the Balkans question.

Elevator Blaze Halts Service in N. Y. Skyscraper

New York, June 30 (AP).—An elevator shaft fire cut off all elevator service in a 42-story midtown Manhattan skyscraper late today, forcing thousands of office workers to walk to the street.

Dense smoke filled the upper floors of the building but police said there was no panic, although several women were reported to have screamed from windows.

Former Postmaster General James A. Farley, now head of the Coca-Cola Export Corp., was among the tenants who walked down. He had to descend 15 floors.

Firemen clambered all the way to the top floor to fight the blaze. They said a short-circuit probably caused the fire, which was extinguished after an hour and 20 minutes.

liam P. Goodman, electrical appliances store, at 8400 Georgia ave., Silver Spring, and William M. Wright, jeweler, at 8229 Georgia ave., Silver Spring.

In Baltimore, officials said 557 licenses had been issued in Prince Georges County and 610 in Montgomery County.

Merchants' reaction in the two counties was varied but was principally antagonistic. One group complained the new tax would drive business to the District, where no sales tax now exists. Others objected to keeping records of the tax collections.

The president of the Independent Trade Association of Prince Georges County, Charles T. Hartley, estimated that his auto service and accessory firm would have to expend about $1000 a year in salaries to maintain the records.

Calls It 'Negligible'

When reminded that the State permits a deduction of 3 per cent from the tax collections for the merchant's trouble in collecting, he complained that the allowance would be "negligible."

"On $100 worth of goods, we collect about $2 in taxes. At 3 per cent, that means we get 6 cents for our trouble. That's negligible, in my opinion," he explained.

Edgar Baum, manager of the Crossroads bar and restaurant at Peace Cross in Bladensburg, cut the price of drinks by 2 cents each and printed new menus showing the reduced prices. With the tax added, the total price will be the same as before the tax.

Operators of cigarette vending machines in Hyattsville jumped the gun yesterday by decreasing the number of pennies returned in the cellophane wrappers by one, presumably because of the tax that becomes effective today.

Prince Georges and Montgomery County retailers said there was no sudden spurt in business yesterday in an attempt to avoid payment of the tax, but in Hagerstown, merchants reported a boom in sales of all kinds because of the impending tax.

Staff Augmented

In Baltimore, the 100-man staff of the tax division was augmented by members of State Comptroller James J. Lacy's organization, in an overtime attempt last night to mail licenses to last-minute applicants.

Meanwhile, in Annapolis, the Maryland Economic Council, permanent State-wide, nonprofit organization dedicated to achieving repeal of the tax, planned yesterday to continue its campaign "until the voters of Maryland have an opportunity to decide for themselves whether or not they want this destructive type of taxation."

In the District, retailers, thwarted in their efforts to gain authoritative information on their status in connection with the sale of goods delivered into Maryland, were looking forward to the arrival of the sales tax division officials here tomorrow.

The executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade, William H. Press, said he received inquiries throughout the day from District merchants, but could not obtain replies from the tax division.

'Record Not Clear'

"The record is not clear on what is taxable," he said. "A lot depends on whether Maryland makes a rigid interpretation or not."

The tax division head, Kennedy, and his general counsel, Edward F. Engelbert, will address local retailers tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce auditorium in a meeting sponsored by the Board of Trade.

The secretary of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, Edward C. Shaw, also complained of inadequate information from the tax officials. Shaw said coal, fuel oil and building supply dealers serving clients across the Maryland line have been encouraged to apply for the tax licenses to comply with the "use tax."

This is a companion measure, which provides that goods purchased outside Maryland for use within the State shall be subject to a "use tax" computed at the same rate as the sales tax. The question of how this tax is to be enforced and what part the District merchants will be required to play in its collection has not yet been answered.

Discussion Slated Today

The retail merchants' division of the Silver Spring Board of Trade will hold a luncheon at the Silver Spring Grill today at 1 p. m. to discuss the new tax.

Kennedy, in the midst of a torrent of inquiries, declared in Baltimore that he had "confidence that the tax will work as well here as it has in other States."

He said that his staff was still working on the preparation of regulations and interpretations of the tax, but expected the final version to be ready for distribution to license holders, chamber of commerce, and banks by the end of the week. At present the regulations total 70.

Kennedy said that he planned to tour the State in coming weeks explaining the tax operations.

Thomas Predicts Practical Plans For European Aid

Geneva, June 30 (AP).—Senator Elbert D. Thomas (D., Utah) predicted today that "practical plans will have been devised before European economic problems become more acute."

Addressing the thirtieth session of the International Labor Conference the Senator said it was unlikely that there would be "a further general price rise of any consequence, on the one hand, or, on the other, that it (the United States) will experience more than a moderate recession in the level of its industrial activity and employment in the immediate future."

Langer Seen Delaying Inquiry In Justice Dept. Vote Probe

By The Associated Press

A Senate Judiciary subcommittee yesterday failed to act on a resolution calling for an investigation of the Justice Department's handling of alleged irregularities in the 1946 Kansas City Democratic primary.

Chairman Ferguson (R., Mich.) told reporters after a brief meeting of the subcommittee and a long session of the full committee behind closed doors that the principal reason for no decision was that he had been unable to get his group together long enough to discuss the proposed inquiry.

However, there were indications that Senator Langer (R., N. Dak.) may be blocking any immediate action. Langer, a member of the three-man subcommittee, told newsmen that he had not formed any opinion as to whether an investigation should be conducted.

Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), the single minority party member of the subcommittee, said before yesterday's session that there was no justification for a Republican-controlled investigation "unless they want to squander the people's money."

Met About 20 Minutes

Ferguson said the subcommittee met for about 20 minutes to read a preliminary draft of its report in connection with the proposed inquiry, but did not finish this job by the time the full committee convened.

He said he would attempt to meet later with Langer and McCarran to try to arrange another meeting of the subcommittee.

The resolution being considered calls for an investigation of the 1946 primary election in which President Truman supported Enos Axtell, Democratic candidate for the House of Representatives.

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), chairman of the full Judiciary Committee, said the subcommittee made no report. He said this must be done before the full committee can act.

Asked why it was taking the subcommittee so long to submit its report, Wiley replied:

"I suppose they have so many things to do that they haven't been able to get around to it."

Wiley reported that the full committee had discussed the proposed inquiry "in a general way," but he added there was no indication as to when there might be some action.

Ferguson has contended there should be a full inquiry into whether the Justice Department limited the Federal Bureau of Investigation in its checkup on alleged frauds in the election.

Navy Chiefs Fight AAF Contentions

Post Reporter

Two top-ranking Navy admirals yesterday challenged Army Air Force claims for long-range bombing and the need for a separate air force.

Admiral John H. Towers, pioneer naval flier, and Rear Admiral Ralph A. Ofstie, also an airman, attacked the Administration's Army-Navy unification bill before the House Executive Expenditures Committee.

They joined a last stage fight against the measure being waged by individual naval air admirals—which, however, seems doomed to defeat.

Hearings End Today

Hearings are to be ended today, with three other ranking naval aviation leaders due to be heard in opposition. The legislation is on the "must" list of both the House and Senate, and Congressional leaders ruled the hearings had dragged on long enough.

They've been held, off and on, most of the session, but opponents charge the committee is denying them a full opportunity to be heard.

Representative J. Sterling Cole (R., N. Y.) told the group yesterday that they had "peremptorily restored the gag on naval officers at the moment the Navy Department removed it."

'Unanimously' Opposed

He said that naval officers are "practically unanimously opposed" to some features of the bill, but that until last week Navy Department directives barred them from expressing their views.

Admiral Towers, now chairman of the Navy General Board and former Pacific Fleet commander, said he favored a "modified form of unification". But he made it evident he was opposed to the major features of the present bill—a single Secretary of National Defense and a separate air department.

"I know of no responsible high Navy officer who approves of a separate air force", Towers testified.

Most pressure for such a plan, he declared, comes from Army Air Forces officers. Under unification, Towers contended, the AAF "will swallow up the Navy Air Force."

Admiral Ofstie, a member of the Joint Army and Navy Liaison Board to the Atomic Energy Commission, backed Towers' position. He told the committee that perfection of the proximity fuse—a wartime invention—will "eliminate strategic bombing in future wars."

High-speed, short-range jet bombers will be used to carry atomic bombs in a future conflict, Ofstie stated, not the AAF's big, long-range B-36s and B-50s. We'll have to move forward, step by step, as we did in the Pacific, to seize bases for attacking an enemy, the admiral stated.

Both Towers and Ofstie predicted that push-button warfare is a long way off. The former said it would appear "utterly impossible" to defeat the United States by atomic attack within 24 hours or a few days as some have forecast. He added that "we haven't the control of guided missiles you've been led to believe."

Representative Cole revealed that he had selected "at random" 175 ranking naval officers and written them asking for their views on unification. One hundred replied that they are opposed, 18 favored it, and the rest failed to reply, he said. The latter, he declared, feared retaliation from the Navy Department if they spoke against the bill.

The committee also heard Capt. Walter Karig, USNR, veteran Washington correspondent and writer, in opposition to the bill. He declared the proposed "super-secretary" will "inevitably be dominated by the military professionals."

Representatives of the American Legion also appeared before the group. They urged creation of a single department of national defense, with "equal" Army, Navy and Air Forces.

Today the committee is scheduled to hear Vice Admiral Gerald F. Bogan, Rear Admiral J. J. ("Jocko") Clark, and Capt. J. G. Crommelin—well-known naval airmen. All are understood to be against the bill.

House Subcommittee Reports Favorably On Cash Payment

Legislation providing for the immediate payment of GI terminal leave bonds was approved by a House Armed Services Subcommittee yesterday.

The vote was unanimous despite Treasury Department protests that payment would be "inflationary."

Full committee approval of the bill is expected this morning, with prospects of final passage this session favorable.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Edward F. Bartelt told the subcommittee that payment of the bonds would put from one to one and half billion dollars more cash in circulation. This is "bound to result in further upward pressure on prices," he said.

Terms of Bill

There are now some 8½ million bonds with a face value of $1,800,000,000 outstanding. Officials estimate the total eventually will reach about 2½ billion dollars when all eligible veterans apply.

Under the bill, bondholders may redeem them in cash after September 1, or continue to receive 2½ per cent interest until the obligations mature in five years. Those who have not applied for bonds can ask for either cash or bonds after passage.

The time limit for applying would be extended from September 1, 1948, under the measure. Some 16,000 banks now authorized to cash U. S. savings bonds would pay off the bonds, by the terms of the bill. Those cashing them would receive accrued interest to date.

Only Treasury Opposes Bill

Only the Treasury appeared in opposition to the bill. Representatives of the War and Navy Departments and Veterans' Administration took no stand, while veterans organizations and some 30 Congressmen urged approval.

House Republican Leader Halleck took issue with the Treasury's stand. He declared that payment of the bonds would amount to a reduction in the national debt, and said the Treasury will save money on interest by borrowing for less than rate it is paying on the bonds.

Last year, the Senate opposed cash payments for terminal leave, but leaders indicated yesterday that they would favor the present legislation.

Stop-Gap Resolution Extends Import-Export Control Act

By The Associated Press

House passage sent to President Truman yesterday a stop-gap resolution extending for 15 days import-export controls authorized under the Second War Powers Act.

The controls expire at midnight tonight unless extended. They apply to certain items in short supply.

The House earlier had voted for a longer extention. A similar bill is pending in the Senate. The temporary extension was voted to give Congress time to act on this legislation.

There were these other actions on the final day of the fiscal year:

Legislation giving the Reconstruction Finance Corporation another year of life and cutting down its powers was signed by the President.

Foreign Loans Prohibited

The measure prohibits the agency from making foreign loans and puts a limit of two billion dollars on its borrowing capacity—so far as new business is concerned. Without the extension, RFC would have expired at midnight tonight.

Mr. Truman also signed similar legislation continuing the Commodity Credit Corporation until June 30, 1948.

Legislation continuing the 3-cent postage rate on first class mail was passed by the Senate and sent to the White House.

Action was by unanimous consent. Failure to approve the resolution would have reduced the rate to 2 cents last midnight. The resolution also continues all other present postal rates.

Old-Age Pensioners

The President signed legislation by which old-age pensioners may be allowed to draw assistance checks while they serve as farm workers or civilian nurses.

Wartime authority under which the States can disregard agricultural and nursing earnings in making old-age assistance available was extended by the President's signature to July 1, 1949.

The House Ways and Means Committee reported the legislation is needed to take care of a general shortage in nurses and a lack of farm labor, particularly in Oklahoma and Texas.

President Truman signed the bill to make the Army's volunteer enlistment more attractive.

Under it, youths may enlist at 17 instead of 18, provided they have written parental consent. And they may choose either two, three, four, five, or six years' service. The old law permitted a choice only between one or three years.

Men in the top three grades—master, technical and staff sergeants—who want to make a career out of the Army may reenlist for unspecified periods. They will get a $50 bonus for each year of reenlistment.

Oil Leaders Hold Needs Can Be Filled

Minneapolis, June 30 (AP).—Oil industry leaders expressed confidence here today that overall needs for gasoline, fuel oil and other petroleum products can be met although temporary shortages may develop in certain areas because of transportation difficulties.

"There is no overall shortage of oil or its products," Walter S. Hallanan, president of the Plymouth Oil Company and chairman of the National Petroleum Council told delegates to the summer meeting of the marketing division of the American Petroleum Institute.

"W have the oil at the wells and we have sufficient refining capacity to turn out the products—the real problem is to get the products where the consumer wants them. We have every reason to believe that this demand can be met adequately if it were not for transportation bottlenecks that arise from inability to have sufficient basic steel materials to meet this vastly increased demand."

At an earlier press conference, Hallanan agreed with Eugene Holman, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, and B. L. Majewski of the Deeprock Oil Company, that the problem was one for the industry to solve and that it would be solved without industrywide coordination, government control, or relaxation of antitrust laws.

Joining Holman and Hallanan at the press conference, Majewski, who presided at today's meeting, described the fact that several hundred thousand acres of corn had to be planted as much as three times, as a factor contributing to the shortage in the Midwest.

"The fact that a great deal of corn was washed out twice," he said, "meant that about three times as much gasoline was used by farmers in the highly mechanized Midwest farming area."

Hallanan was sharply critical of the Government policy in permitting export of tubular goods and other steel products which he said "is building up the industry and war-making potentials of Europe, including communist Russia, at the expense of our own economy."

St. Louis Hit By Quake as Flood Passes

St. Louis, June 30 (AP).—The Mississippi River flattened out at St. Louis today after surging to its highest level here in 103 years, but damage generally was confined to the immediate riverfront districts of this metropolitan area.

The rampant river breached one dike on the Illinois side north of St. Louis proper, but Army engineers said they expected two stronger barriers behind it to hold flood waters out of the highly industrialized cities of Venice, Madison and Granite City, Ill.

About 2000 persons working under supervision of U. S. engineers turned their attention to two seriously weakened levees south of St. Louis, one of them protecting a district in which Dupo, Ill., with a population of about 2000, is located. The Red Cross was prepared to evacuate Dupo residents to nearby cities if necessary.

The river remained at 39.3 feet at St. Louis at six and one-half hours but gradually fell one-tenth of a foot shortly after noon.

Quake Spreads Alarm

A sharp earth shock at 11:25 p. m. (EST) yesterday which was felt throughout St. Louis and points as far as 20 miles away was of more concern to St. Louisans than the flood last night.

It rocked large buildings, rattled dishes and windows and brought thousands of the city's residents out into the streets. Although it was the sharpest quake recorded since St. Louis University set up its seismographs in 1910, no serious damage was reported. A chimney toppled from one house.

The Red Cross revised slightly downward to 31,000 its estimate of the number of homeless persons in Missouri, Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska. About 3250 persons had been forced out of their homes in the general St. Louis area, the Red Cross said.

Missouri's Worst Past

The worst of the Missouri River flood apparently had passed.

Army engineers at Memphis said they were confident that levees in the lower Mississippi Valley below Cairo, Ill., would withstand the pressure of the flood crest moving southward.

North of here near the confluence of the Missouri and Mississipi Rivers the almost deserted town of West Alton, Mo., population 200, was under 3 feet of water.

The St. Louis district engineer's office estimated the floods had caused $8,741,000 damage between Louisiana, Mo., and Cairo, Ill., with a total of 333,000 acres in the district inundated.

U.S. Major to Pay $12,000 For Seducing Briton's Wife

Manchester, England, June 30 (U.P.).—A United States Army major today was ordered to pay $12,000 damages and costs for abusing an Englishman's hospitality by seducing his wife.

Judge F. B. Batt, calling Maj. Al Amundson's conduct "extremely reprehensible," awarded Philip Shelmerdine, 37, $12,000, a divorce decree nisi and custody of two children.

Judge Batt said he could tell just by looking at beautiful Rita Shelmerdine, 34, that Amundson must have paid her "deliberate and long" attentions before achieving his aims.

Amundson, who was not in court, maintained that he did not know Mrs. Shelmerdine was married.

Traitorous Newsman's Sentence Is Delayed

Boston, June 30 (U.P.).—It will be at least two weeks before Douglas Chandler, 58, one-time American newsman, learns what penalty he must pay for the treason he committed by serving in World War II as a Nazi propaganda agent.

Federal Judge Francis J. W. Ford said today he would need that time "to reflect" on what sentence he would impose on Chandler, convicted Saturday on 10 counts after a three-week trial.

Senate Action On Perlman Seen in 10 Days

By The Associated Press

Chairman Wiley (R., Wis.) told reporters after a closed meeting of the Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday that he hoped for action within a week or 10 days on the nomination of Philip B. Perlman of Baltimore to be Solicitor General.

He said there still remains some investigation which he said might be cleaned up this week. A subcommittee hearing on the nomination has been called for this morning (9:30 a. m., EDT.).

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.), opened extensive hearings May 14 on the nomination, made by President Truman in January.

Wiley said that under the rules of the Judiciary Committee subcommittee chairman are "autonomous" and have complete control over such investigations.

Saxony Minister Says Socialization 'Great Success'

Berlin, June 30.—The socialization program in the Soviet occupation zone has been a tremendous success, according to Kurt Fischer, Moscow-schooled Minister of the Interior of the state of Saxony.

Fischer told American correspondents in Dresden last week that industries accounting for 30 per cent of the economic output of Saxony have been socialized, production is 70 per cent of the prewar volume, which compares, he said, with 46 per cent for industries in the American occupation zone.

"Not only have we no unemployment," he said, "but there is a great need for more workers in our state."

Yokohama Specie Bank Closes After 68 Years

Tokyo, Japan, June 30 (U.P.).—The Yokohama Specie Bank, one of Japan's best known financial institutions, closed today after 68 years. The government ordered the bank to close in accordance with its plan for reconstructing Japan's financial institutions.

Level of U. S. Intelligence Is Declining, Bureau Reports

The average intelligence of the American people probably is declining, Guy Irving Burch, director of the nongovernmental Population Reference Bureau, reports in a "population bulletin" of the bureau released yesterday.

The study is entitled "Is American Intelligence Declining?" and carries the following foreword:

"A recent survey made in England by Sir Cyril Burt at the request of the Royal Commission on Population suggests that in 50 years the number of students of scholarship ability will be approximately halved and the number of feeble-minded almost doubled. This conclusion was reached on the basis of psychological tests and size of family."

In his article, Mr. Burch says:

"In the United States a number of measurements of intelligence seem to point to the same conclusion, namely, that differences in the birth rate among large groups are causing a decline in the intelligence of the American people. Four of the most reliable of these measurements are (1) psychological tests, (2) educational attainment, (3) economic status and (4) type of occupation. Regardless of which test we study, we may reach the general conclusion that the lowest third in each of these four categories has about twice as large families as the highest third."

110 From U. S. Attend Lutheran Parley in Sweden

Mund, Sweden, June 30 (U.P.).—Swedish Archbishop Erling Eidem opened the assembly of the Lutheran World Federation today at a solemn service in 800-year-old Mund Cathedral before some 600 delegates from 28 countries, the largest meeting of the church since 1938.

Americans, numbering 110, comprise the largest group of delegates. Germany sent 40 delegates for the first time since the war began.

Oscar A. Benson, vice president of the Augustana Synod, said the American delegation is convinced the convention is most important for future work of the Lutheran Church and hopes to return home with more understanding of the special difficult problems of Lutherans in Europe.

Agreement Signed

London, June 30 (U.P.).—A temporary Anglo - Egyptian financial agreement, involving Egypt's $1,654,000,000 balances in London, was signed at the Treasury Office today.

citizens, such as the Washington Criminal Justice Association."

J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.), chairman of the House subcommittee dealing with District police and firemen, said The Post disclosures "are startling," and his group should make a complete study and investigation at the request of citizens' groups.

Criminal Justice Board Called

Edward J. Flynn, recently appointed managing director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, declared yesterday he was "following the printed reports and their developments." He said, however, he preferred "to get the expression of our board before making further comment."

The association's executive board has been called to meet in special session tomorrow afternoon to discuss The Post articles which revealed the association is not getting full reports of crimes and complaints of crimes within the District.

A spot check of police activity yesterday by Post reporters found police deck sergeants unusually busy over records and record books. In some instances, the reporters were asked to wait for periods of more than one hour before they could examine "Volume Books," where felony complaints are entered, because they were in use.

At Police Precinct No. 13, two police sergeants were found at work over the current "Volume Book." After a 15-minute wait, the reporter was told by one of the sergeants: "We've got a lot of work to do, this book won't be available for another hour."

Cool Reception

A Post reporter was given a polite but cool reception at No. 2 Police Precinct station house when he asked to look at the current records. While he was transcribing notes, the book was recalled for a notation but returned promptly.

"Give it back to that reporter," said a sergeant to the police clerk. He likes to make trouble for people."

Clifford H. Newell, president of the District Federation of Citizens' Associations, expressed "surprise" at the state of police affairs as revealed by The Post.

"I feel that if there is any disposition on the part of police, detectives, or anybody to hold back information that should belong to the public, such action is reprehensible and corrective measures should be taken immediately," Newell declared.

"I hope our officials will make a very thorough study of methods used by our police in recording crime, and correct any evil where it is found to exist.

"The Washington Post deserves a lot of credit for the thoroughness of its examination of the lack of organization in police records-keeping."

A quiet and intensive scrutiny of precinct records and secret Detective Bureau robbery squad files by Post reporters disclosed more than 600 "pocketed" complaints on robberies alone in the period of July 1, 1946, to May 31, 1947. These are in addition to the 761 robberies acknowledged in official police statistics for the same period.

These 600 cases, reporters found, had not been reported in the crime statistics, they had never been disclosed to the public or press, and they had never appeared on the police teletype, from which crime statistics are compiled at the police central bureau.

Methods Vary

More than 300 cases were found in precinct "Volume Books." They were marked "Hold" at the request of the Detective Bureau. More than 300 others were found in secret files marked "C" and "M" at the Detective Bureau.

Those collected at the precincts came from public records. The Post did not get the Detective Bureau files from official police sources.

The Post investigators carefully eliminated all duplications and many dozens of other cases which appeared improperly classified by the police before arriving at the total of 600.

Falls Church Council Votes Taxi Control

An ordinance for rigid control of taxicabs in Falls Church, Va., was adopted unanimously by the Town Council in a special meeting last night.

The measure would permit the council to limit the number of taxis in the town, but did not specify any maximum number. At present, a single company maintains six cabs in the area.

Must Be Licensed

The ordinance requires drivers to obtain special licenses from the chief of police, who is empowered to reject any application because of physical disabilities or for other reasons.

Other features of the ordnance authorize the trial justice to suspend licenses of drivers for "repeated" traffic violations or for failure to complete calls as promptly as possible; establish standard rates for group riders and require operators to submit copies of insurance policies along with applications for licenses.

Authorizes Petitions

The council also authorized circulation of petitions among property owners on West Broad st. to determine if they would be willing to pay one-fourth the cost of sidewalks along that street from Washington st. to town limits.

Half the cost of the project would be paid by the State and the remaining one-fourth by the town.

At the request of Harry Nalls, a 25,000-square foot tract at Wilson blvd. and Route 7 was rezoned from residential to commercial to allow construction of a gasoline filling station.

Acheson Given Medal of Merit As He Ends Federal Service

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson stepped back into private life yesterday with a Medal of Merit from President Truman and extraordinary tributes from all sections of the Government.

His retirement, taken at his own request for financial reasons, came after six and a half years in high office at the State Department. For many months of that time he had served as Acting Secretary, while Secretaries Byrnes and Marshall were away at conferences abroad.

His Medal for Merit came as a surprise on his last day in public office. He was summoned to the White House shortly after noon to find Mrs. Acheson, Secretary Marshall, former Secretary Byrnes and a group of official and personal friends waiting for him.

President Reads Citation

The citation read by the President commended him for "outstanding services to the United States." It summed up his recent career in these words:

"Mr. Acheson, as a private citizen in 1940, was among those who first saw clearly the Fascist threat to our national existence. He exerted his distinguished advocacy to rally his fellow citizens in favor of the delivery of American destroyers to beleaguered Britain.

"As Assistant Secretary of State from Feb. 1, 1941 to August 16, 1945, and as Under-secretary of State until today, he has been one of the architects of victory and of the struggle for peace.

"In his relations with the Congress, Mr. Acheson fostered a responsive relationship between the executive and legislative branches of the Government in the field of foreign affairs; and he brought to the councils of Government a long view and a genius for bold design typified by the Acheson-Lilienthal plan for international control of atomic energy."

Honored by Cabinet Luncheon

Farewell tributes unusual in the Government occupied his last day at the Department. The Cabinet gave a luncheon in his honor after the medal ceremony at the White House.

In the afternoon, ranking officials at the department trooped into the Undersecretary's high-ceiling office with an inscribed water carafe and tray as a goodby gift. Later there was "open house" in his office so that other officials and stenographers could shake hands with him and give him their good wishes.

In the evening Secretary Marshall gave him a farewell dinner at the Mayflower.

Official business also crowded into the last day's schedule. In the morning Acheson met for almost an hour and half with the so-called "9:30 group" of top officials with whom he had met morning after morning during critical months and years in the department.

Confers With Connally

What was described as "routine business" took him to Capitol Hill in the afternoon for a talk with Senator Tom Connally, ranking minority member of the Foreign Relations Committee. Late in the afternoon he had a visit from the Belgian Ambassador, Baron Silvercruys.

Acheson plans to spend a month at his farm at Sandy Spring, Md., and then have vacation in the Canadian Rockies before resuming private law practice with the Washington firm of Covington, Berling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb.

His successor, Robert A. Lovett, New York banker and former Assistant Secretary of War for Air, will be sworn into office today as Undersecretary. Formr Ambassador Norman Armour, who will be Assistant Secretary in charge of all four geographic offices at the Department, will also be sworn in today.

Rep. Schwabe Opposes Rise In Basic Wage

By the United Press

Representative Max Schwabe (R., Mo.) yesterday spoke out against proposed increases in the Federal minimum wage.

He told a House Labor subcommittee that this would be "the first step toward Government determination of what is a fair wage," and that "for the Government to determine what is a fair wage is not American—it is European."

The subcommittee began hearings on a series of bills to increase the minimum wage rate from its present level of 40 cents an hour.

Representative Melvin Price (D., Ill.) urged "immediate action" to raise the minimum to "at least" 65 cents.

A number of bills have been introduced proposing increases ranging from levels of 55 cents to 70 cents. Republican House leaders have indicated that they favor an increase to 60 cents an hour.

Schwabe said minimum wage legislation has been tried all over the world and found unsatisfactory. "If the minimum wage is high enough to be effective, it results in a loss of production," he said.

John V. Lawrence, managing director of American Trucking Associations, said many small communities would be affected unfavorably by an increase in the minimum wage rate. In other sections, he said, an increase to 60 cents would "have no effect at all."

Price is author of a bill calling for an immediate jump to 65 cents an hour with increases to 70 cents and 75 cents to occur at 2-year intervals. A House Labor subcommittee began hearings on the measure today with Price as a witness.

Price said he thought the bill would pass if Congress were given an opportunity to vote on it.

Danish Freighter, Army Transport Collide at Sea

Boston, June 30 (AP).—The 3500-ton Danish freighter Bolivia limped back toward New York today after an early morning collision which disabled the Army transport St. Albans Victory in dense fog on the steamer lane about 60 miles south of Nantucket.

Although the Bolivia suffered severe damage to her bow, she was able to proceed at slow speed under her own power.

With a gaping hole torn in her port side, the transport's engine room was flooded with 24 feet of water and she waited a tow as Coast Guard craft stood by, ready to take off her crew of 70 and 85 war dogs, members of the Army's Canine Corps, if necessary.

Ten Army passengers were taken off the St. Albans Victory by the Navy attack transport Wyandot, which was in the vicinity.

The transport was bound for New York from Leghorn, Italy, and the Bolivia from New York to Copenhagen when the collision occurred.

CIO Man Lies, Says Rep. Jones

Lima, Ohio, June 30 (AP).—A labor leader's affidavit that he inducted Representative Robert F. Jones into the Black Legion was labeled "a most vicious and malicious lie" by the Ohio Congressman today.

Jones' statement was given to Robert C. Barton, managing editor of the Lima News.

Glenn E. Webb, a member of the executive board of the Lima local of the CIO United Electrical Workers, signed an affidavit Saturday stating he inducted Jones into the Black Legion in a farm house near here "about 1935."

Editor Barton quoted Jones, Republican who has been nominated to the Federal Communications Commission, as saying that Webb was attempting to "destroy a person whom he could not control in public life."

Jones declared the CIO had "spent an estimated $25,000" in an attempt to defeat him in the last election.

The Lima News managing editor said Webb signed the affidavit in the presence of him and Robert Waldron, another member of the News' staff. He said the form of the affidavit was dictated over the telephone by Drew Pearson, Washington columnist and radio commentator. Pearson testified against Jones' last week when he appeared before a Senate Commerce subcommittee.

Water Works Deal Up Again

Alexandria's City Council will meet in special session tonight to discuss with water company officials the city's offer of last week to purchase the company for $2,750,000.

Alexandria Water Co. President Jerome Powers told the council emphatically last week that the company does not wish to sell. The next day the company released plans of an expansion program now under way to increase and protect the city's water supply. Expenditures of one million dollars are planned in the next two years.

The move to buy the company grew from an agreement by the company to furnish water to a Fairfax County builder, and from the fear that this might ultimately endanger the city's supply.

The Alexandria School Board yesterday sent a letter to the council disapproving the purchase on the ground that the city would thus reach the limit of its bonded indebtedness and could not carry through a proposed school building program.

When City Manager Carl Budwesky explained that the water company could be bought with a special bond issue that would not interfere with the school program, the protest was withdrawn.

Councilman R. Samuel Luckett said his school site committee will present for council approval offers to land owners for the sites for three new schools.

Price Control Court to Stay

The United States Emergency Court of Appeals, which was slated to disband here yesterday, will continue operating.

The court was organized to hear certain types of price-control cases. Although price control is generally dead, approximately 20 cases still remain on the court calendar. In addition, the OPA successor agencies intend to file other actions growing out of past violations of price-control legislation.

Bolitha J. Laws, one of the three judges of the court, said he and his associates interpreted legislation to mean that the court is to stay in existence as long as is necessary to clan up the calendar of cases.

Justice Laws said it was probable the court will remain in operation for several months, at least.

Two Brothers Indicted for Hoax Robbery

Two youthful brothers were charged in a District grand jury indictment yesterday with perpetrating the $3790 hoax robbery of the Credit Bureau, Inc., on June 20.

Grand larceny and embezzlement charges were placed against the brothers, Robert R., 21, and Allan C. Olson, 19, of 505 6th st. se.

This was one of 47 indictments returned by the grand jury at the end of its three-month regular term. The talesmen refused to indict in 22 cases.

Alan Olson was employed as a messenger for the credit company. After he was sent to a bank with a check which he cashed, he returned to the company and claimed he was robbed, police said. On his forehead, there was a slight bruise.

Only $50 Found

Police said that later Alan confessed the robbery was a hoax and implicated his brother. The youths asserted the money was hidden behind a bowling alley stairway, police said, but only $50 in change was found there.

In another case, an alleged "numbers game" writer was charged with attempting to bribe a policeman to "go easy" on traffic and gambling charges placed against him. The defendant, Jeff Thomas, 36, 1806 S st. nw., offered $150 to Police Pvt. Harry C. Lee of the 12th precinct, according to the indictment. The officer arrested Thomas February 4, police said, while he was speeding with numbers slips on Bladensburg rd. toward the Maryland line.

Francis J. Myers, 40, now serving a term in Leavenworth, was charged with swindling a woman here out of $2560 in an "oil well" deal. According to the indictment, he told Mrs. Jimmie R. Henderson, 1918 N st. nw., that he represented a company which had producing wells in the west and offered to "invest" the money in the company in 1945. After giving him the sum involved, she claims he disappeared and she has not seen him since.

Eugene R. Andrews, 41, 1810 Benning rd. ne., was charged with operating a lottery in the vicinity of the Department of Agriculture building. According to police, Andrews was seen daily in May picking up a bag containing numbers slips near an Agriculture Building door.

The grand jury refused to indict in the following cases:

Abortion: Dr. Alvin E. W. Wode, 37, Glencove, Md.

False pretenses: Eli R. Pershing, 54, 1245 N. Pierce st., Arlington.

Destroying movable property and assault with dangerous weapon: Carl F. Tolliver, 38, 1320 W st. nw.

Jury Indicts Williams in Realty Deals

George H. Williams, bankrupt real estate man, was indicted yesterday on mail fraud and bad check charges in his dealings with veterans here who paid him a total of about $200,000 for housing they never obtained.

The District grand jury returned a ten-count indictment against Williams, who operated in the Greater Washington area, promising veterans houses in three nearby developments he was building.

More than 150 veterans of World War II lost $500 to $1000 deposits in dealings with Williams, it was reported.

The indictment relates that the defendant set up the "George H. Williams Co." which purported to be "legitimate, responsible and reputable" and pretended to sell to veterans lots and houses financed by GI loans. Williams advertised in newspapers here and employed salesmen.

Williams, the indictment continued, deposited forged checks in his bank account to induce the veterans to delay taking action to recover deposits and to make them believe their investments were secure and their houses would be completed.

The true bill states Williams made the following misrepresentations by word of mouth or by mailed letters:

Owners Get Coal Mines Back But Miners Are Vacationing

tions of the industry this week. Presumably the United Mine Workers' leader would permit those mines to reopen and thus apply more pressure on other owners.

He is demanding a 35 cents an hour wage increase, an eight-hour day to replace the present nine-hour day, and doubling of the 5-cent royalty on each ton of coal for the UMW welfare and retirement fund.

Some Doubt About Offer

Private conferences between Lewis, President Benjamin F. Fairless of the U. S. Steel Corp. and George M. Humphreys, head of the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Co., were reported last week to have led to offers to meet the wage demand in full.

There was some controversy yesterday over whether the offer actually had been made to Lewis, however. Several industry representatives professed not to know about it. Others expressed belief that the industrialists came away from their secret talk with Lewis convinced they would have to settle for the full 35-cent increase.

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach, whose Conciliation Service is the only Government agency which now has any contact with the dispute, is keeping hands off for the time being. He is expected eventually to assign James Dewey, veteran coal conciliator, to revive the broken-down negotiations between Lewis and the mine owners.

Blast Furnace Closed

Baltimore, June 30 (AP).—Closing of a blast furnace and other facilities at the Bethlehem Steel Co.'s Sparrow Point mill was announced today as an aftermath of the coal mine shutdown.

In a statement, the company said that "because of the present outlook in the coal situation, this is an opportune time to make overdue and necessary repairs to No. 7 blast furnace. This necessitates curtailment of steel production to the extent of taking off No. 2 open hearth, consisting of five furnaces."

The blast furnace was shut down today, along with the rail mill and the 60-inch plate mill. The five open-hearth furnaces will close tomorrow.

A company spokesman said the total of employes affected was "a small number" and that most of them were taking vacations while others were "being utilized for other purposes."

An official of Baltimore District 8, United Steelworkers of America, refused to say how many men were affected by the shutdown.

"We of the union know and the Bethlehem Steel Co. knows how many men will be put off their jobs and I don't blame the company for not releasing the figures," said Glee Smith, assistant director of District 8.

John L. Lewis' Home District Ignores Coal Mine Holiday—It' Non-Union

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Des Moines, Iowa, June 30.—Miners, the few left in John L. Lewis' old home District 13 mine workers, are digging coal this week in spite of the mine holiday.

The reason is that more than half the mines, that 25 years ago constituted an Iowa industry second only to agriculture, are nonunion.

Coal mining in Iowa is dwindling away. The market is limited to this section, and constant work stoppages and recurring coal shortages have turned consumers to other fuels, as these figures show:

During World War I, more than 18,000 men were engaged in mining coal in Iowa's rich fields. The production in 1917 was between 9 and 10 million tons. It was 100 per cent union operation.

Last year only 152 mines operated. Total production was 1,750,000 tons, with only 2642 miners employed.

Since then five of the largest mines have closed, the machinery pulled out of the pits, and the shafts abandoned.

Today it is estimated that there are less than 400 dues-paying members of the United Mine Workers left in the State.

At Albia, the site of the UMW Temple, the entire field is nonunion.

Of the coal produced last year 42 per cent was from union mines, 33 per cent from nonunion strip mines and 25 per cent from nonunion shaft mines. Nonunion production is now believed to be much larger.

So bad is the situation that May 16 Lewis canceled the charter and the district is now operated by UMW national headquarters in Washington.

A few months ago a big black limousine drew up before the miners temple in Albia. A bushy-eyebrowed man got out, greeted by old-timers hurriedly called together. John L. had come back for a visit. He spent almost a week. Those who knew him when said he left a disappointed man.

Three great Iowa cement plants, the utilities and other industries have turned to natural gas. Railroads, once operators of the largest mines, have turned to oil.

Morris Youngquist, who was administrator under NRA and later for war agencies, recently refused to head a new association of coal operators. He "didn't want to attend the funeral."

Iowa operators see in the decline a pattern for other districts when the great demand for export coal is over.

Railroads to Ask ICC for Increase In Freight Rates

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—The Nation's railroads plan to ask the Interstate Commerce Commission for freight rate increases up to 25 per cent in the East and up to 15 per cent in the West and South, W. H. Dana, chairman of the Western Traffic Executives' Commission, said today.

Dana said notice of the impending petitions for these increases had been sent to directors of the National Industrial Traffic League, which represents the Nation's shippers.

The notice was signed by Dana; John F. Fitzpatrick, chairman of the Traffic Executives' Association, eastern territory, and J. G. Kerr, chairman of the Southern Freight Association.

The carriers' notice stated that "the proposed increases are based on estimates of the carriers' present day needs and do not take into account any possible future increases in wage rates, fuel costs or other expenses."

U.S. Again Loses Sedition Case; May Take It to Supreme Court

The United States Court of Appeals here wrote the last word yesterday barring a Supreme Court review—in the wartime sedition case.

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner held that the Justice Department was not diligent in setting a new trial after the first one ended with the death of Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher in the District Court three years ago. So, Groner said, Eicher's successor, Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws, was clearly right in dismissing the case last December.

Justice Henry W. Edgerton dissented, pointing out that although Prosecutor O. John Rogge was doubtful about the case, he never opposed a speedy trial and more than two years ago asked for a date to be set. He said that it was his view that Chief Justice Laws went beyond his authority.

The Justice Department last night said the ruling was being studied, and might be taken to the Supreme Court.

Thus came the close of a prosecution which began more than five years ago, when investigators found that there were many common themes in the propaganda of outright Nazi and Japanese agents and that of their American well wishers.

Prosecutor William Power Maloney led a grand jury inquiry which brought a consipracy indictment in 1942, and a second indictment a few months later.

Maloney was pressing for a trial date to be set early in 1943 when he was removed by Attorney General Francis Biddle under pressure from isolationist Senators and Congressmen.

Rogge took Maloney's place, but was not ready for trial for nearly a year more, during which he conducted a new investigation which brought a third indictment.

Maloney had said he could try the case in from three to six weeks. As it was redrafted by Rogge the case dragged on nearly eight months, and was far from being finished when it was cut short by the death of the presiding chief justice.

Meanwhile, Rogge has developed doubts that a conviction would stand, which were not allayed by evidence he brought back from Germany last year.

Attorney General Tom C. Clark, however, twice turned down Rogge's advice that the case be dropped and ordered it pressed to trial. When Chief Justice Laws blocked this with his dismissal order last December, Clark ordered the appeal which was decided against the Government yesterday.

Railroad Men's Sick Benefits Start Today

An estimated 16,000 Greater Washington railroad employes are covered by sickness benefits under an insurance plan which goes into affect today.

The plan to insure railroad workers against loss of wages from temporary disability is embodied in an amendment to the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.

According to H. W. Murphy, field representative of the Railroad Retirement Board, benefits will range from $1.75 to $5 per day, depending on the amount of the claimant's 1946 earnings. The maximum that any worker can draw in a year ranges from $227.50 to $650, he said.

To become eligible for benefits, applicants must have earned $150 or more in railroad employment in 1946 and be unable to work at least 7 days out of a consecutive 14-day period.

Applications, available at railroad company and RRB offices, should be mailed to an office of the RRB within seven days after the first day to be included in the claim. A doctor's statement should be inclosed.

Long Federal Careers End For 6 in D. C.

Six employes of the Federal Government with terms of service totaling 231 years were retired yesterday. Four were employes of the Veterans' Administration.

Roger S. Drissel of 512 Oneida pl. nw., who was 70 yesterday, left the State Department's division of communications and records where since 1943 he has been a divisional consultant. He entered Government service in 1900 at the Navy Yard at League Island, Pa., and seven years later joined the State Department.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall yesterday presented him a letter of commendation and fellow employes gave him a gold watch and easy chair.

45 Years of Service

John F. Brady, 68, of 818 Farragut st. nw. retired from the War Department after 45 years of service. He was chief clerk in the office of Army Chief of Engineers. His first Government job was in the office of the District Engineer Commissioner.

Frederick C. Edwards, 63, of 3107 35th st. ne., cost accountant with the Veterans' Administration budget division, spent 26 of his 39 years in the Government service as a VA employe. He entered the service at the Boston Navy Yard.

Miss Ruth Gist, 70, of 1028 Connecticut ave. nw. was a teacher before she became a Government employe with the old Bureau of War Rick Insurance in 1918. She retired as a ledger account clerk in Veterans' payees account service.

Sarted in 1902

Robert S. Nichols, 70, of 802 58th ave., Bennings, retired as assistant chief of the records division of the Veterans' Administration. He joined the Government service in 1902 as a file clerk in the old Pension Bureau.

Dr. Ealla R. Fales, 72, of 1914 Grace Church rd., Silver Spring, Md., is the fourth septuagenarian to retire yesterday from the Veterans' Administration. She was graduated from the old National University as a medical doctor in 1900. She taught in the District schools and practiced medicine before joining Government service 26 years ago. She has been a medical rating specialist with the Veterans' Administration since 1933.

Driver Is Injured As Truck Upsets

Clarence Unglesbee, 57, of Olney received a bruised leg early yesterday when a tire on the Martin's dairy truck he was driving blew out and the truck overturned on Route 28, 3 miles west of Darnestown.

Unglesbee was given first aid treatment by the Gaithersburg-Washington Grove Fire Department and was taken to the Montgomery County General Hospital, where his condition was listed as "very good." The heavily loaded panel truck was righted by the firemen, who said the damages were minor.

Lawyer Taken Ill Arguing In May Trial

Seventy-year-old Attorney Perry W. Howard collapsed yesterday while he was arguing the May-Garsson conspiracy case in the District Court.

Howard stood silent before the jury for about a minute before anyone saw that he could not speak. He said afterward that his mind had gone blank. He wanted to go on with the argument, but Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut called a recess until 9 a. m. today.

Howard was defending Murray Garsson, who did not take the witness stand to deny the Government charge that he and his brother, Henry, bribed former Congressman May. All three are accused of conspiring for the sale of May's influence as House Military Chairman to the Garssons.

Prosecutor John T. M. Reddan told the jury yesterday morning that May put profits ahead of patriotism. He said the Garssons poured money into the Cumberland Lumber Co.—which never shipped them any lumber even though they needed it badly—to cover up their payoff to May.

When the investigators began to close in on them, Reddan said May and the Garssons lost their nerve and he gave the lumber firm back. But Reddan argued that this did not make May any the less guilty.

Sawyer Smith, a jury orator in the old-time Kentucky tradition, made a two-hour plea for the former Congressman. Saying May was an old man (he is 72) and penniless, he asked whether the former Congressman would be broke today if he had been bribed. From extolling May, Smith turned upon the prosecutors, saying that their tactics showed how low a man will go to win a lawsuit.

Howard is a formr special assistant to the Attorney General and is now Republican National Committeeman for Mississippi. He has been a lawyer in Washington about 15 years, and in 1934 was one of a committee that set out to organize American Negroes to fight Nazism. During his half-hour speech yesterday, Howard told the jury that Army officers discriminated against the Garssons because they were Jews, and that this and not bribes won them May's backing.

Howard was reported resting last night at his home, 1829 S st. nw. His partner, former Municipal back to court today, but ought to Judge James A. Cobb, said he did not believe Howard ought to go rest and leave the defense to the Garsson chief counsel, Charles J. Margiotti, who is due to speak most of today.

Russians Allow Individuals Wide Freedom in Hungary

By Daniel De Luce

Budapest, June 25 (by airmail) (AP).—A Hungarian today has more individual liberty than a citizen of the Soviet Union may enjoy in another generation.

Russian military courts are estimated to have tried a mere half-dozen Hungarians in six months. American military courts in Germany exceed that number of cases in a single day.

A strategic "window to the west," Hungary is treated with more forebearance than any other Russian-occupied country.

For two years, Red generals have wielded supreme power here. American and British influence, through the so-called Allied Control Commission, has been farcically ignored.

Travel Almost Unrestricted

Yet after all this, Hungary is obviously far from sovietization.

A Moscow professor would not dream of subscribing to the London Times. In Budapest, it is delivered to the college door by the postman, with no embarrassing questions asked.

Russians travel abroad strictly upon official missions, or not at all. A Hungarian needs only to uncover a chance to earn foreign money and he will get a passport tomorrow.

Soviet rationing is still at a grim subsistence level. Here a few basic foods require coupons but the open market abounds in every luxury commodity from whipped cream to snakeskin dancing slippers.

A Russian family would tremble at the prospect of being caught entertaining a foreigner in the home. Hungarian acquaintances deluge a Western visitor with weekend party invitations.

Hungarians flock into theaters showing Hollywood movies. Ten are playing now in Budapest. British films are rapidly gaining popularity. But those from Russia have been boxoffice duds.

English is the favorite language study.

Private trade is booming. This occurs despite nationalization programs for several industries and Soviet management of others.

Former minor members of Hungary's Nazi Party, the Arrow-Cross, don't have to worry. The Communists have extended them an official invitation to join and all will be forgiven.

A whisper of warning is needed only by those who object loudly to Hungary being a Soviet satellite until the Marxist millenium.

Their inability to preserve a tactful silence for the duration of the occupation has caused the Russian army to regard them as dangerous western spies. In Germany, of course, American authorities take a poor view of Communists in their zone.

But even with the spy scare, such as it is, you'd never mistake the Budapest Corso for Red Square.

U. N., Irgun Pact Reached

Jerusalem, Palestine, June 30 (U.P.).—Delegates to the United Nations Palestine Commission met secretly with Jewish Irgun Zvai Leumi underground leaders and secured a promise they would halt the renewed outbreak of terrorism, a reliable source said today.

The source said Irgun arranged the meeting, held "within the last 24 hours" at the all-Jewish city of Tel Aviv, and that high-ranking underground leaders attended.

Later, an Irgun spokesman qualified the gang's promise to cease attacks, stipulating that British "provocations" also must stop.

One UN delegate expressed confidence that the meeting "heralded th end of terrorism."

Shortly before the secret meeting, Irgunists kidnaped two British soldiers at Ramat-Gan, 10 miles north of Tel Aviv, but later released them.

The Palestine commission started a three-day tour of Northern Palestine, visiting Jewish settlements in the Haifa area.

[Gasoline prices advanced five cents a gallon in a government-sponsored plan to make the Jewish community pay for the one million dollar destruction of Haifa oil installations last March by the Stern gang.

[The government promised to divert proceeds to cover "this and other damage to oil installations" to the Arab community in development projects "for which funds are not otherwise available," the Associated Press said.]

Senate Group Favors Lauderdale

James W. Lauderdale's nomination to continue as a member of the District Public Utilities Commission was unanimously approved by the Senate District Committee yesterday.

Senate District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) sent the nomination to the Senate for action probably today.

Lauderdale's appointment for a new three-year term has been delayed following a protest from the Washington Industrial Union Council, CIO. Their protest was based on the fact Lauderdale took part in the decision to boost Washington transit fares.

Pope Asks Recovery Plan

Rome, June 30 (U.P.).—Pope Pius today appealed for a realistic plan for European construction based on "renewed cooperation supplanting former enmities."

Receiving new British Ambassador John T. W. T. Perowne to the Holy See, the Pope said that "any further delay in initiating the work of reconstruction is to the disadvantage of both victor and conquered."

Vatican circles interpreted the Pope's address as full church support of United States Secretary of State George C. Marshall's plan for aid to Europe.

The Pope said Perowne had "come at a time of grave and universal concern. The international atmosphere is tense with suspicion, arising in part from conflicting ideals and leading to alarming distrusts."

"The human soul, having survived the horrors of a war without parallel in history, is being torn and tortured between fear and expectancy," he said.

Apparently referring to the Marshall plan, the Pope said the British people were not alone in recognizing reconstruction needs.

"Far-seeing statesmen and clear, dispassionate thinkers in the New World, for all its vast industrial power, have brought it to be common knowledge with their people," he said, "and in many other countries, also, experienced, unbiased men are coming to admit its cogent truth."

Greece And The U. N.

A good deal of complaint was heard some weeks ago about the United States by-passing the United Nations in embarking upon its policy of aiding Greece and Turkey to maintain their independence. Whatever merit this criticism may have had at the time, it is now wholly overshadowed by the vigorous manner in which Warren R. Austin, the United States representative to the U. N., is prosecuting the case for peaceful settlement of the Balkan dispute through the Security Council. His demand that the Security Council make use of its machinery to settle border disputes between Greece and her Communist-dominated neighbors is now meeting resistance from some of the very forces that were so recently chiding the United States for working outside the U. N.

What Mr. Austin asks is that the Security Council establish a commission to aid in restoring normal conditions along the frontiers between Greece and her neighbors—Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania—"thereby assisting in the establishment of good neighborly relations." The commission would investigate frontier incidents and complaints by any of the governments concerned. It would use its good offices to settle disputes, to secure the adoption of conventions for peaceful adjustment of controversies growing out of border incidents, and at the same time keep the Security Council informed of developments in this trouble spot. With a commendable sense of restraint, Mr. Austin is asking the Security Council to act under Chapter VI of the United Nations Charter which gives it authority merely to make recommendations for the peaceful settlement of disputes.

If the encroachments upon Greece's independence should continue, it is clear that the United States will ask the Security Council to move against the nations responsible as aggressors. The findings of the U.N. Commission of Inquiry make it evident that Yugoslavia has already been guilty of surreptitious aggression. But all that Mr. Austin now asks is abandonment of these assaults and orderly settlement of any future disputes with the aid of a Security Council agency which can make objective findings on the spot. It is precisely this function that the United Nations was created to perform, and if it is permitted thus to cope with the threat to the independence of Greece, American aid can be devoted wholly to reconstruction in that war-torn land. Thus far, however, the reasonable Austin proposal has met with stiff resistance from the Russian and Polish representatives on the Council. If the U. N. is thus prevented from assuming its normal function in dealing with disputes of this sort, there will be no shadow of doubt as to where the responsibility lies.

Ford Pension Plan

Under the terms of an agreement with the United Automobile Workers the Ford company is preparing to set up a retirement fund providing pensions for aged employes equal to at least half their average annual earnings. Total costs to the company of establishing the system and thereafter making annual contributions to the fund are estimated to be equivalent to a wage increase of 14 cents per hour. Although the workers will help pay for the costs of the system, the benefits will be many times the amount of the annuities that could be purchased with their individual contributions.

Interest in general pension plans of this kind has been steadily growing in recent years. A good many companies have already introduced retirement systems, but the great majority are designed for the benefit of higher-paid executives. Yet it is the lower-paid rank-and-file workers who stand in greatest need of the protection afforded by retirement plans, since they are less able to save, and the benefits payable under the old-age social insurance system are entirely inadequate in the great majority of cases to meet their needs. Hence the Ford plan covering more than 100,000 production workers is a real landmark in the history of collective bargaining.

Apart from the cost to the employer, one of the most serious obstacles to the creation of private pension systems of a comprehensive sort is the instability of the working forces of many industrial concerns. While the ups and downs of the business cycle result inevitably in loss of jobs, the security of tenure of experienced workers in the older age groups would be greatly enhanced by retirement systems that not only give them an incentive to stay on the job but also encourage their employers to retain them as long as they are able to do a good day's work. The widespread practice of replacing older men by workers under 40 is due in considerable part to the lack of retirement systems which would permit employers with a good conscience to dispense with the services of aging employes when their usefulness is ended.

To sum up: a pension system for production workers not only relieves the beneficiaries of anxiety about the future, it is also a good investment from the viewpoint of the employer. The UAW deserves a vote of thanks, therefore, for its willingness to limit its wage demands in order to make possible the launching of the Ford pension plan. We hope the example thus set will be followed by other unions and companies.

Minority Rights

President Truman's brief address on Sunday to the conference of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People presented a shocking contrast between American principles and American performance. "Many of our people," the President acknowledged, "still suffer the indignity of insult, the narrowing fear of intimidation, and, I regret to say, the threat of physical injury and mob violence. The prejudice and intolerance in which these evils are rooted still exist." The indictment is unanswerable. It must be recognized, indeed, that war, the supreme intolerance, has left us an aftermath in which prejudice is peculiarly apt to find violent expression. And there has been quite enough of this sort of expression since the war's end to give us real uneasiness at home and a serious loss of prestige abroad.

Noting that the civil rights laws dating from the early years of our Republic "were written to protect the citizens against any possible tyrannical act by the new government in this country," the President declared that "the extension of civil rights today means not protection of the people against the Government, but protection of the people by the Government." This is simply to say, of course, that we must look to government—state and local, as well as Federal—to afford that equal protection of the laws which the Constitution enjoins and which is the indispensable core of the democratic process. For a denial of equal protection to any minority imperils justice for all.

But we must look beyond the machinery of government to our own consciences for eradication of the prejudice and intolerance which the President rightly designated as the roots of the evil he deplored. We must look to community effort, particularly at the local level, to eliminate patterns of discrimination which run counter to democratic ideals. We must look to agencies like the NAACP which, through its long, patient and persistent effort to protect the civil rights of Negroes, has performed, as the President observed, "effective work for the improvement of our democratic processes." Equality of opportunity is the key concept of the American society. It can be impaired only at the cost of impairing the whole structure of that society. We must learn that and live by it.

European WPB

An economic concert of Europe including Russia seems impossible to achieve as the result of the Russo-British-French talks in Paris. Mr. Molotov's objections bar agreement. The secrecy governing the parley makes it difficult to determine the sequence of these objections. It seems that in response to the Bevin-Bidault proposal to set up an agency or agencies for the integration of national economies in Europe, Mr. Molotov countered with the request that the whole matter should be referred to U. N.'s European Commission, which will meet again at Geneva on July 5. When the British and the French declined, he seems to have asked that more information be requested on what our Congress will do for Europe. That, of course, is putting the cart before the horse. Secretary Marshall invited Europe to find out what Europe, after an inventory of resources, could do for itself in reconstructing the Continent as a "working economy." The Administration declared it would seek congressional help only after such a plan had been prepared. Mr. Molotov did not rest content with this effort to return the ball to America. He appears to have justified the Bevin-Bidault declination to remit the Marshall proposal to the Economic Commission for Europe by turning his back on any exploration of a scheme for the integration of national economies in Europe. Any discussion in the Economic Commission would amount to precisely nothing within the terms of reference set by Secretary Marshall.

It is to be hoped that any disappointment that Mr. Bevin may feel will not be expressed in a Bevinesque explosion. That would worsen the diplomatic atmosphere. And it would make the position of the French the more difficult as they confront the dilemma of having to make up their minds whether to continue limited negotiations with the view of bringing as much of Europe as possible within a scheme. The Communists in France are bound to take the tip from Mr. Molotov's diplomacy. They may be expected to throw every ounce of effort into restraining the Ramadier government from making a further try to link and coordinate France's reconstruction with Britain's. But if the Ramadier government stands firm, the Communists might be outbluffed. The Marshall initiative, judging from the comment in France as well as Britain, has appealed to the silent men in both countries. They see action in conformity with it as their only salvation. If they remain steadfast, and the French government sees a mandate in such a manifestation, the Communists may be outwitted. An initiative on the part of Paris and London is, furthermore, encouraged by the avid interest expressed in the capitals, notably in Brussels and Bern. Secretary Marshall would be content, judging from his Harvard speech, with a partial European plan.

Accordingly, the best course to pursue, it seems to us, is to resume, after a respectable pause, the British-French conversations under Mr. Monnet's aegis. They have continued at the instance of former Premier Blum since last August. Little progress seems to have been made, but an impetus is now forthcoming from Secretary Marshall. It may be that this spur will yet bring action, as some of the European newspapers hope, in formulating a super-Monnet Plan. The Monnet Plan, certainly, is the nucleus for basic reconstruction. It provides for action in key industries, the modernization of the out-of-date plant in these industries, and a system of priorities for investment money and of allocations for raw material and new equipment. To stretch its provisions to include Britain would be to start the scheme that Secretary Marshall has in mind. The result, if the neighboring countries should see any seriousness of purpose in London and Paris, might conceivably be the blueprinting of a sort of continental WPB.

Somewhere on the way the capitals in Europe might pluck up courage to issue what the London Observer calls a declaration of interdependence more or less like the Articles of Confederation which were the prelude to the American Union. At least such a declaration has become the aim of the growing army of unionists in Europe. That is probably too much to expect in view of Moscow's frown. However, such a declaration would be implicit in supranational agencies engaged in allocating new equipment available at home or from abroad to jobs that are most urgently needed to speed the revival of Europe. It would be better to underline in some ringing statement the meaning of this kind of activity.

But, even if this is impossible, the significance of functional agencies similar to those we had in our WPB could not be lost on Congress. Russia, we are convinced, would not allow the task of integration to go very far before trying in some way to participate in it. For one thing, Czechoslovakia and Poland would get progressively more restive as this activity went on, and Moscow cannot altogether ignore her satellites, especially when a question of living standards is involved. If Russia can impose a veto on European recovery and the prospect of American investment in it, then the hope of restoring the circulatory system of Europe will go under a cloud, and the future of Europe cannot be foreseen. The struggle to save Europe that Russia is avowedly blocking will be watched with deep concern in America.

Anti-Petrillo Act

The Supreme Court's favorable view of the so-called Anti-Petrillo Act loses some of its significance because of what happened on the Senate floor about the time this decision was being handed down. When this case was dealt with by Federal District Court, we felt that James C. Petrillo had made a formidable assault upon the validity of the act directed against his featherbedding practices. Congress had singled out broadcasting employes for a special type of regulation. It put a penalty upon the use of force or duress to compel the hiring of more employes than are needed to perform actual services. But the law was limited in its application to broadcasting employes. We felt that this was an unreasonable and discriminatory policy which should not be permitted to stand.

A majority of the judges on the Supreme Bench, however, found no constitutional weakness in the act on its face. "It is not within our province to say," wrote Justice Black for a majority of five, "that because Congress has prohibited some practices within its power to prohibit, it must prohibit all within its power." The three dissenting justices thought the Anti-Petrillo Act too vague to meet the requirements of "due process." The significant fact is that Congress took note of both the weaknesses that have troubled some judges—vagueness and discrimination—when it gave the Taft-Hartley Act final shape. That act makes it an unfair labor practice for a union "to cause or attempt to cause an employer to pay or deliver . . . any money or other thing of value, in the nature of an exaction, for services which are not performed or not to be performed."

All unions in interstate industries are now subject to this restriction, and it seems to us that all doubt as to its meaning is removed. There is no point now in keeping on the statute books the vague and particularistic Anti-Petrillo Act, which was really designed to curb the activities of only one person. We think it should be repealed.

BEACH STREET, HACKENSACK

From this fine walk, of hill and distant view,
Stone's throw from gracious house where I was born,
How often have I seen old buff and blue
March past below, and heard the English horn
Deride them, hot upon their track, a tale
My fathers wrote with ichor, stamped on earth
That nourished me, till all the river vale
Is radiant to my loyal eyes; what worth
I have wells up from sturdy roots in soil
Beneath my feet wherever I may stand;
To loveliness hard won by blood, by toil,
I am again that boy who pledged his hand,
His bursting heart, upon this pleasant street,
Where still the ancient dream is hale and sweet.

Division Of India

As the president of the Nationalist Party of India now in London, may I respectfully enlist the sympathy and services of your esteemed paper in the cause of democracy in India?

The Indian people are not at all consulted regarding the partition of India. The British government is relying on two parties, viz, Congress and the Moslem League, for partitioning India. These are merely political parties organized on party lines and have no constitutional position to ask for or consent to any partition of India.

We emphatically say that any partition of India effected without the consent of the people expressed through their directly elected representatives on the basis of universal franchise would be highly unconstitutional, illegal and undemocratic and will not bind the people or the future generation. It will be open to any party to resist the same and agitate against it. Other Indian parties also are not consulted. A substantial part of the Indian people are definitely against this partition.

We have submitted a memorial to the British government and the houses of Parliament on the above lines. We have approached the United Nations and President Truman with a smilar request.

If the United States and her press are really the champions of democracy, irrespective of the color of the people of India, will they seriously take up this question, without fear or favor of anybody? K. R. BENGERI,
President, National Party of India.

Political Education

It seems to me that we are working backward with the problem of American communism.

While it is undoubtedly true that the American Communist Party is composed of a hard core of professional international (in the sense that all agents of exported political theories are international) pro-Soviet politicians. This body, almost totally helpless in itself, is made useful and dangerous by its surrounding mass of active but miseducated party members—Americans, who for one reason or another, have withdrawn their political activities from the mainstream of American politics. Most of these misguided persons are Communists because of the tragic failure of our major parties to provide the people with basic political education and the means for mass political action.

This education should begin in the home; but it is common, there, to find that politics become important only once a year, perhaps less than that.

Our young men and women reaching physical maturity, with all its demands upon them for operation of a good and honest democracy, are dangerously lacking in the know-how of fundamental political action. Until this lack is filled we can expect to see more and more politically good citizens become easy prey for communism and its thousand-and one front organizations that promise action, though sadly misdirected, instead of the frustration and stagnation of our present party system.

Russia In Korea

Rectifications, not excuses, are the prerequisites in clearing off the debris of international misunderstanding and fear and in the building of a warless world. Today's world trouble is not the lack of peoples' desire for peace; it is the wrong attempt to obtain peace.

In the case of Russia, while the thinking Koreans strive to seek the best way to preserve peace and security by elevating Korea to the status of a neutral and sovereign state as a Switzerland of Asia, Russia raises an army with communized Korean youths in Russian-occupied North Korea. Whatever excuses Russia puts up for raising this army, the thinking Koreans and the whole world take the assumption that Russia will use that Korean army in waging a civil war in Korea in case the 95 per cent non-Communist segment resists the domination of 5 per cent communized Korean minority.

Again, Russia, while breaking agreements with others to suit herself, insists on enforcing the 1945 Moscow-decided trusteeship over Korea by saying Koreans are not experienced in self-government. When the ancestors of Anglo-Saxon and Slav races were wandering in the forests of northeastern Europe, Korea had highly developed government and a splendid civilization. The real motive behind Russian's pretext is Russia's intention to communize Korea as much as possible during the life of trusteeship.

The world knows that Russia uses such tactics not only in Korea but in everywhere else. And it is this what drives the lovers of justice and fair play, liberty and honor to take firm stand against Russia. Unless Russia ceases these tactics, a third world conflict is inevitable. PEONG KOO YOON,
President, Korea Society in California.

Religion In The Schools

I have been very much interested in the discussion concerning religious instruction in the public schools. I wish to register as being against such practices for the following reasons:

1. The place where religious instruction should be given is neither in the schools nor churches but in the homes.

2. The school is no place for religious instruction because there are few of our regular school teachers who are capable of giving religious instruction.

3. If the schools did have the proper instructors, I would seriously object to my children, if I had any, having just anyone's religious ideas forced upon them. I certainly respect the rights of those children whose beliefs run contrary to my own not to have my beliefs forced upon them.

There is a whole world of difference between trying to get children to attend a Sunday school and forcing religious training upon them.

It is a sad state of affairs when Christian parents are unable or so unwilling to personally see to the religious education of their children so that they expect institutions supported by the taxes of people whose religious ideas are different, and even people who honestly are opposed to religion to impart something which they are unwilling to give to their own children.

If every Christian parent gave religious instruction in the home there would be no need for anyone else's giving this type of instruction. The Christian churches have more to fear from members of their own congregations not living up to their duty as Christian parents, than they do from those who outwardly oppose Christianity.

Universal Military Training

American newspapers have been guilty of much one-sided reporting with respect to the question of universal military training, and it is to be regretted that the usually liberal Washington Post has done the same thing. Practically every development which favors universal training receives prominent space while those which oppose it or refute the arguments in its favor have been shoved into some inconspicuous place or not printed at all.

Just a few days before the President's Advisory Commission made its report the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church adopted a program opposing universal military training. A regional meeting of the Evangelical and Reformed Church after the commission reported, adopted a resolution opposing universal training. Very little attention was given the action of these bodies.

I have just received a copy of a resolution passed by the annual conference of the Church of the Brethren meeting in Orlando, Fla., in June. I quote it:

"We protest the effort to force peacetime universal military conscription and training upon our Nation, and the spending of public funds to propagandize and influence legislation for the same by the military arms of our Federal Government.

"According to the plan proposed by the President's commission, about one million young men between the ages of 18 and 20 would each year be subjected to the rigid military discipline and indoctrination which can in no sense be regarded as preparation for the life of freedom under a democratic pattern of society and in a world at peace.

"History has abundantly proved that instead of peacetime universal conscription providing security, every nation that has adopted it has been involved in war.

"The adoption of universal military training by the United States will, instead of promoting respect, lead to fear and profound distrust on the part of other nations, thus sowing the seeds for greater armaments and probable conflict. . . .

"There is a terrible implication in the plea to have universal military training for education in citizenship. This plea betrays a distrust of free education, an admission that a free people can no longer manage its system of public education as regards educational objectives. . . .

"The claim of the proponents of universal military training that the proposal will provide a commendable system of character education is confronted by hundreds of years of experience and evidence to the contrary. . . .

"Universal military training is a definite threat to the principle of religious liberty . . . in that it removes our young men from the influence of the home and the local church at a vital age in their lives and exposes them to the skillful methods of indoctrination of the Army and to the social pressures of an army camp which for immature youth are almost irresistible."

The churches still stand opposed to universal training, yet of all the newspapers I have read I have yet to see one reporting this fact to its readers. Neither have I seen any paper point out that the CIO adopted a resolution opposing it, and that the AFL is also opposed to it. Nothing has been said about the fact that the educators on the President's commission were not representative of the thought on this issue in the field they theoretically represented.

With this one-sided presentation of the situation, it is no wonder that public opinion polls show majorities in favor of universal training. The American people have been victims for a long time of propaganda for a "tried and found wanting" European system that is as foreign to our principles as fascism or communism.

Washington Calling

After UNRRA

THE FIRST practical, functioning agency of the United Nations has come to the end of its existence. Buffeted, battle-scarred, beset by the fierce pulls of national rivalry, the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is now a finished chapter in the dubious book of world cooperation.

In weary, hungry Europe, the UNRRA offices are closing. They are closing not because the job is done, but because fear and distrust prevented a working partnership in this elementary task.

The big question mark is what is to fill the gap from here on out. It is a hopeful portent that the foreign ministers of Britain, Russia and France are meeting in Paris to try to agree on a plan for European reconstruction that would eventually have the backing of American aid.

But, even if this succeeds, the need for immediate day-to-day relief remains. Eight hundred thousand refugees are still in UNRRA camps. They are the victims of Europe's anarchy, men and women who refuse to go home to servitude or persecution with torture and death as alternatives.

AN EFFORT is being made to form a new International Refugee Organization to take care of this part of the UNRRA job. But the effort is meeting serious obstacles. IRO is still a hopeful chart that may or may not come into being.

The United States loaned Arthur Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, to help set up the new organization. Altmeyer went to Switzerland expecting to stay a few weeks. He has been in Geneva four months, wrestling with the problem until he is on the verge of a breakdown, according to reports here.

Congress has just now authorized United States participation in IRO. It will be well into July before money is appropriated to cover our share of the costs. IRO is committed to pay British and American occupation authorities for maintaining the refugee camps in the two zones. If this is enforced, there will not be enough of IRO's 112-million - dollar budget to last through the current year.

That leaves the refugees in a pretty uncertain state. They will probably be fed. But it doesn't take much imagination to think what this new uncertainty will mean to men and women who have lived under the long shadow of doubt for two or three or four years.

The refugees were a comparatively small part of UNRRA's job. Most of the money went for general relief.

The United States will now offer relief. The administrator of the American program, Richard F. Allen, a former Red Cross official, left for Europe the other day. Congress has authorized $350,000,000 but here again no money has been made available The State Department got an advance from the RFC of 75 million dollars in order to make a start. Similarly, no money has actually been appropriated for the Greek-Turkish program and the RFC came through with 100 million dollars on the cuff.

IN THE FOUR years of its existence, UNRRA took much undeserved abuse. In instance after instance, charges that relief supplies were being used for political purposes were refuted. Yet the refutation rarely caught up with the noisy accusation

With understandaole pride, Maj. Gen. Lowell W. Rooks pointed out in a final statement as director of UNRRA that it had distributed nearly three billion dollars in supplies, about three times the value of relief provided after World War I. This went to 17 different countries. Inevitably in the wake of the most destructive war in history, there were difficulties, delay and waste.

UNRRA held off major epidemics of the kind of diseases ordinarily rampant after wars. It never had sufficient resources to prevent the spread of such plagues as tuberculosis, which is now widespread.

A year ago the United States signaled the end of UNRRA. This was done because of the belief that Congress would not again appropriate money for an international relief organization. That was correct. But Congress has been almighty slow about appropriating money for any kind of relief. We shall have reason to regret the untimely end of the only functioning U. N. organization which has now become history.

Feather Haircut

You did not know, I am sure, that you were in error when you published pages 10 and 11 of your June 15 issue of Parade, but I do want to correct the mistake about the feather haircut.

M. Louis did not originate the feather haircut; I did—in March, 1931, in the New York City Pennsylvania Hotel at the International Beauty Show, for which I received the international loving cup.

I am sure M. Louis has created styles which have been adopted by the American women, but let's not give credit to France for something that was done in America.

Waning Morse

In his article in The Post of June 27, the practical and sensible Mark Sullivan makes reference to Senator Morse of Oregon, and his failure to enlist more than three Republican votes in his effort to prevent overriding of the President's veto of the Taft-Hartley law. In view of that failure and considering his general recalcitrant attitude, it is suggested that the Oregon Senator's name should be changed from Wayne to Waning Morse. W. B. BROWN.

Soviet Dilemma

By Barnet Nover

Molotov Phones The Kremlin

IN HIS EIGHT YEARS as Soviet Foreign Minister, Viacheslav Molotov has been in many a tough spot. Private reports that have reached Washington from Paris indicates that he has never been in a tougher spot than now. What is more, he knows it.

NOVER

That is why, insiders at the three-power conference are convinced, Molotov and his aides completely monopolized the telephone line from Paris to Moscow for many hours last Friday, following the first meeting of the Russian, British and French foreign ministers.

Exactly what Molotov said to Stalin and the other members of the Politburo is, of course, a deep secret. There are reasons to believe that in the course of his telephonic conversations with his bosses in the Kremlin, the Soviet Foreign Minister asked for new and more liberal instructions.

AT THE FIRST meeting of the three foreign ministers, Molotov discovered, what he certainly must have known beforehand, that Russia's views regarding the carrying out of the Marshall proposal are wholly unsatisfactory to Great Britain and France.

More important, he also discovered that Great Britain and France could not be bluffed, brow-beaten or bludgeoned into accepting these Russian views.

The Soviet foreign minister learned that Ernest Bevin was speaking not only for himself but also for a determined if uneasy Bidault when he declared, as he did the eve of the Paris meeting, that the western powers would go ahead without Russia, if Russia took an obstructionist line on the Marshall plan.

THE LAST THING the Kremlin desires is such independent action by Great Britain and France.

An economic arrangement designed to rehabilitate Western Europe alone would not do the job that needs to be done in Europe.

Western Europe cannot thrive without Eastern Europe, the great granary of the continent. But an economic federation of Western Europe would, in British and French eyes, be infinitely preferable to the spreading chaos which is infecting almost every Old World nation today.

Great Britain and France are, in a very real sense, nearing the end of their financial rope. Aid must come quickly if they are to be saved from a catastrophe.

This mounting sense of an impending economic doom has blunted any political fears they may have had regarding the consequences of Russian abstention from and hostility to a European federation plan.

MOLOTOV has to take into account more than the present mood of Great Britain and France. He also has to keep in mind that the Marshall plan has an enormous attraction for Russia's own satellite states.

They, too, are desperately eager to get on their feet.

Russia cannot help them in this regard at all. The United States can. So can a more closely integrated Western Europe whose industrial plant has been put on it feet.

IN HIS OPENING speech at the Paris conference, Molotov did not ignore the views of Russia's satellites.

On the contrary, his speech was designed to support the thesis that Russia is particularly solicitous not only of the economic needs of her satellites, but also of their political and economic independence.

Every nation, Molotov proposed, should draw up a bill of particulars regarding its own needs, with these demands pooled into one over-all budget. At the same time the United States, he demanded, should be asked to make known just how far it is willing to go and just how far Congress will permit the United States to go, in aiding Europe.

Russia's satellites will not be fooled by the Kremlin's apparent solicitude for their welfare. Molotov's cliches cannot fill the stomachs of their hungry people, warm them, clothe them and give them employment.

What Poland and Czechoslovakia are interested in, no less than are Great Britain and France, is a real program of reconstruction.

The same is true in Western Europe. The died-in-the-wool Communists in France and elsewhere can be expected to support the Russian line wherever it leads. But the fellow travelers may be antagonized by Russian obstructionism.

Molotov knows that too. That is why he has sought new instructions from the Kremlin. He knows that if Russia is saddled with the blame for a complete deadlock at Paris and for the postponement or whittling down of the Marshall plan which has given encouragement to millions of Europeans, it will be increasingly difficult for the Soviet government to hold its satellites in check. Yet while he cannot afford to reject the Marshall plan outright he cannot, without new instructions from the Kremlin, make any real approach to the British and French views on the subject. It is up to the Kremlin to decide. It is not an easy decision for the Politburo to make.

Text of President's Message To Congress on Rent Controls

To the Congress of the United States:

I HAVE today signed H. R. 3203, the Housing and Rent Act of 1947, despite the fact that its rent control provisions are plainly inadequate and its housing provisions actually repeal parts of the Veterans' Emergency Housing Act which have been most helpful in meeting the housing needs of veterans.

Had I withheld my signature, national rent control would die tonight. It is clear that, insofar as the Congress is concerned, it is this bill or no rent control at all. I have chosen the lesser of two evils.

Without any rent control, millions of American families would face rapidly soaring rents and wholesale evictions. We are still suffering from a critical housing shortage. Many families are desperately seeking homes. In their desperation, they would have to submit to demands for exorbitant rent. Even this inadequate law presents fewer dangers than would the complete lack of rent control.

I have been confronted with a problem similar to the one which the Congress placed before me in the price control Bill which it sent me on June 28, 1946. That bill was so damaging to price control that I vetoed it and addressed the country on the subject. Then, on July 25, the Congress sent me a second price control bill, in some respects worse than the first. The time was so late that I had to sign that bill in order to prevent the complete destruction of price control. But effective price control was impossible under the new law.

If I had vetoed H. R. 3203, rent controls would end, and the prospects of another bill being sent to me would be negligible. I had no choice but to sign.

It is clear that this legislation marks a step backward in our efforts to protect tenants against unjustified rent increases arising out of war conditions. For millions of families, it will result in substantial increases in rents, which until now have been held at reasonable levels. The cost of living is already too high without this additional burden.

It is evident that the present high cost of living should not be increased further by a sharp increase in rents. We must get prices down, not devise means of getting the price of shelter up.

SINCE the end of price control, the consumer price index has risen 17 per cent. Food has gone up 29 per cent. During the second quarter of 1947, we have made real progress in checking these sharp price increases. On the whole, prices and cost of living have leveled off. This progress—and the further progress we must make—would be nullified for millions of families by higher rents. Rents amount to 25 per cent to 35 per cent of many family budgets. Rent increases could revive the inflationary dangers which we have greatly reduced.

A basic weakness of the rent control provisions of the act is the so-called "voluntary" increase of 15 per cent in cases where the landlord and tenant enter into a lease that will continue until December 31, 1948. This is voluntary only so far as the landlord is concerned. Many tenants, however, will feel that there is no choice.

The tenant will naturally fear that unless he enters into such a lease he will be subjected to even more exorbitant increases when rent control is ended. Whenever a vacancy occurs, the landlord can refuse to rent except under a lease providing for the rent increase. Many landlords will press for rent increases whether or not there is need for adjustment. Severe hardship will thus be imposed on many tenants. The hardship will be particularly acute in the case of veterans, who comprise such a large portion of those seeking rental housing accommodations.

The act also weakens the protection against eviction which is necessary for effective rent control, and completely removes the protection of rent control in many cases where it is still badly needed. Administration of the law will be made more complex by the injection of new procedures and will be made less effective by the weakening of enforcement provisions.

All of this represents the abandonment of a system which has been both fair and effective. In its administration of rent control, the Federal Government has made every effort to give full protection to both landlords and tenants. The net rental income of landlords today is substantially higher than in the prewar years of 1939 and 1940, or in the previous decade. Provisions for granting rent increases in meritorious cases have been liberalized and simplified. Over one million rent increases have been granted. Controls have been removed in cases where the need no longer appeared acute. These steps and many more have been taken to keep the administration of rent control simple, practicable, and fair and to prevent hardship. This has been accomplished without permitting substantive increases in the general rent level.

Since Federal rent control is being irreparably weakened, I appeal to the Governors of the States — particularly those populous States where rental housing is more prevalent—to exert every effort to protect tenants from hardship, eviction or exploitation. They can soften, although not avoid completely, the blow to rent control dealt by H. R. 3203.

THE HOUSING AND RENT ACT of 1947 also marks a step backward in our efforts to solve the critical problem of providing sufficient additional housing for our citizens. It repeals almost all the emergency aids to housing provided in the Veterans' Emergency Housing Act of 1946.

In January, 1946, I recommended that the Housing Expediter be given the necessary powers to expedite the production of building materials and the construction of houses.

The Congress responded to my recommendations by passing the Veterans' Emergency Housing Act of 1946. With the emergency measures provided by that measure, the supply of building materials has increased tremendously and the number of new homes built has increased at a rate surpassing our best prewar achievements.

The Veterans' Emergency Housing program was announced in February, 1946. By the close of that year, 670,500 permanent family housing units, in addition to over 300,000 units of other types, had been started. In the first five months of this year, 280,300 new permanent family dwelling units were begun, and 300,000 were completed. Although this accomplishment is heartening, it is not enough.

H. R. 3203 will weaken rather than strengthen our means for greater achievement.

The most serious loss in housing aids under this act is the virtual elimination of controls which have prevented the diversion of building materials from homes to nonessential and deferable construction. As the supply of building materials has increased, the Housing Expediter has eased and simplified controls over materials and construction. Those which were retained were necessary and important, however, and their removal by this act may prove disastrous to home building.

The increased demand for materials and labor resulting from removal of these controls may delay a decline in building costs and may even result in further cost increases. Already many veterans are unable to pay for homes at present cost levels, and this will further aggravate their problems. Moreover, delays in the completion of veterans' hospitals and of other essential construction will result from the increased competition for material and labor.

It is of deep concern to me that this most unsatisfactory law represents the only major action taken by the Congress at this session with regard to the housing problem which confronts the nation. We should be taking steps to provide additional aids to housing. Rather than eliminating the aids which have been in effect.

On many occasions I have placed housing high on the list of subjects calling for decisive congressional action.

On September 6, 1945, in my message to the Congress, I called attention to the shortage of decent homes and the enforced widespread use of substandard housing and warned that the housing shortage would become more acute as veterans returned and began to look for places to live. I urgently recommended that the Congress enact comprehensive housing legislation to meet this problem. My proposals were directed especially to the needs of those families of low or moderate income who cannot buy or rent high priced houses. The overwhelming majority of veterans need such legislation for this reason.

ON January 14, 1946, in the message on the state of the Union, I again emphasized that we faced a major postwar housing problem. I recommended that the Seventy-ninth Congress promptly enact general legislation for a comprehensive housing program along the lines of the Wagner-Ellender-Taft bill then under consideration. The Senate approved the bill, but the House of Representatives was denied the opportunity to vote by delaying tactics within one of its committees.

On January 6, 1947, in the message on the state of the Union, I again recommended action by the Eightieth Congress on comprehensive housing legislation. Such legislation has been introduced and favorably reported to the Senate during this session, but has not yet been passed by either the Senate or the House of Representatives.

The obligation upon the Federal Government is one which cannot be ignored.

Again I urge the Congress to complete action upon legislation to accomplish the following objectives:

1. To provide public aid to localities for low rent housing for families in the lowest income group.
2. To encourage private investment in rental housing by Federal insurance.
3. To provide a more adequate program of farm housing.
4. To extend aid to our cities for the clearance of slums and blighted areas.
5. To perfect and supplement existing aids to home financing.
6. To provide a substantial program of housing research to assist industry in progressively reducing the cost of housing.

Means are at hand for the prompt enactment of legislation which will go far toward accomplishing these objectives. I refer to the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill now before the Senate. This bill has been developed after long and careful consideration of our housing needs. These needs are known. Now is the time for action to set in motion a comprehensive program which will assure the greatest possible number of Americans a decent place to live, at a cost they can afford.

In the face of our acute need for more effective aid for housing, it is unthinkable that the Congress would actually take steps to make more difficult or even impossible the efficient administration of the Government's present activities relating to housing and home finance. Yet, I fear that this may happen.

The House of Representatives has already indicated its disapproval of a reorganization plan which would preserve the grouping of our principal housing functions in a single establishment. The administration of these functions within a single establishment is essential if our housing policies are to be carried out with a consistency of purpose and a minimum of duplication. I strongly urge that this plan be allowed to become effective.

Another danger threatening even the existing aids to housing and home financing arise from the action of the House of Representatives upon the appropriations for the National Housing Agency, including the office of the administrator and the constituent agencies. The drastic cuts made by the House of Representatives in these appropriations, if they are allowed to stand, will seriously handicap the efforts of both Government and private enterprise. The effectiveness of the National Housing Agency will be greatly impaired. If we are to have an effective housing program now and in the future, this agency must have adequate funds and personnel.

A continuing high volume of home-building activity is essential to provide decent housing for all the people. It is equally important because of its contribution to the maintenance of prosperity and full employment. Home building should provide continuous employment to several million workers, directly or indirectly, and be a strong support to the rest of the economy when postwar restocking is over and when the extraordinary foreign demand for American products has leveled off. In the past, this major industry has been an unstable element in the national economy, fluctuating between boom conditions and almost complete stagnation. Without effective action it cannot contribute its full share to the maintenance of high levels of production and employment.

TO BE successful, an attack on the housing problem will require vigorous action by Federal, State and local authorities, in cooperation with representatives of industry and labor. It will require simultaneous action in many fields, including an expanded program of research—both public and private—on housing materials and techniques and joint action to standardize and simplify construction items. It will require revisions of zoning ordinances and local building codes to remove archaic and obsolete provisions. Finally, it will require a good measure of the genius for which American business is famous to improve home-building methods and to apply mass production methods to the manufacture of houses and housing components.

One of the most stubborn obstacles in the way of any constructive housing program has been the opposition of the real estate lobby. Its members have exerted pressure at every point against every proposal for making the housing program more effective. They have constantly sought to weaken rent control and to do away with necessary aids to housing. They are openly proud of their success in blocking a comprehensive housing program.

This group has sought to achieve financial gains without regard to the damage done to others. It has displayed a ruthless disregard of the public welfare.

It is intolerable that this lobby should be permitted by its brazen operations to block programs so essential to the needs of our citizens. Nothing could be more clearly subversive of representative government. I urge the Congress to make a full investigation of the activities of this selfish and short-sighted group. When the truth is known, I am confident that this obstacle to constructive housing legislation will be removed.

The lack of adequate housing marks a glaring gap in our achievements toward fulfilling the promise of democracy. The American people today are better fed than ever before. They have more clothes and more goods of almost all sorts. In the few cases where war-induced scarcities still exist, American industry is catching up with demand at great speed. But this is not true of housing.

The progress in housing has not kept pace with the progress in other fields. Private industry has not done and cannot do the whole job without Government aid. Much has been achieved with the measures heretofore authorized by the Congress. But they are far from adequate. In no part of our national life is there more urgent need for constructive legislation at this time.

I sincerely trust that the Congress will not end this session without meeting the problem squarely.

Present rates range from $40 to $100 monthly.

The Veterans Administration estimated the first-year cost of the increase at $28,938,600, and said it would decline thereafter.

1947 Wheat Crop Loans Offered at Average of $1.83

The Ariculture Department announced yesterday that it would offer growers price-supporting loans on 1947 crop wheat at rates averaging $1.83 a bushel nationally.

This is about 15 cents less than the average price now being received for wheat sold in regular market channels.

Last year the loan rates averaged $1.49. The department is required by law to support grower prices at not less than 90 per cent of parity. The parity price is $2.03, as compared with $1.66 a year ago.

Ideals of American Democracy, Ways of Life Being Taught to Young Men at Athens College

By M. W. Fodor

Psychico, Attica, Greece, June 30.

In the foothills of the violet-wreathed Attic Mountains, surrounded by the towering peaks of the Parnes, Pentelikon and Hymettos, where once gods, nymphs and satyrs were wont to roam, lie the American-looking buildings of Athens College. The bare slopes on the mountainsides remind us of Utah, yet along the road next to pepper and locust trees, the rose-and-white-colored full blooms of the oleander make the countryside look almost lush.

In Athens College, founded by lovers of Hellas in America, Egypt and Greece, ideas of American democracy and of American ways of life are being brought home to the young men of Hellas. In Athens College, as in the many other universities and schools of the Near East College Association, we possess a pivot to spread our moral influence.

This is terribly important at a time when from Stettin to Trieste, from Vienna to the Russian steppes, a big battle is being waged between the Oriental idea of communism and the Occidental conception of democracy. We, in our innocence and ignorance, have started with unequal odds. Soviet Russia fully realized for years what she wanted. Thus clandestinely, yet carefully, she educated a new crop of leaders fit to be the bosses in the Soviet-dominated countries.

Let's look around. Who are the leaders in those countries? Marshal Tito, Alexander Rankovitch and Edvard Kardelj of Yugoslavia, Georgi Dimitrov, Vassilij Kolarov and Tsola Dragoisheva of Bulgaria, Emil Bodnarash and Anna Pauker of Romania, Clement Gottwald of Czechoslovakia—they are all "graduates" of the Lenin Institute of Moscow. In this institute they have learned the rudiments of Soviet administrative methods, of police and secret police oppression, of demagogy and propaganda, all essential to the Bolshevik way of life.

Have we nothing to pitch against this physical and psychological "invasion" from the East? For the last quarter of a century public-spirited Americans maintained various colleges in the Near East which have contributed a rather important chapter in educating the Levant to our own ideas and ways of life. The list of these colleges is impressive, indeed. The Near East College Association maintains the Athens College at Psychico, Greece; the International College and the American University in Beirut, Syria; Roberts College on the Bosphorus in Turkey, the American School for Boys in Baghdad, Iraq; the Istanbul Women's College, the Damascus College in Syria, and the American College at Simeonovo, Bulgaria. In addition, missionary organizations maintain the Pierce College for Girls at Helleniko, near Glyphadia, Greece, and Anatolia College in Salonika, while another group maintains the important Farm School in Salonika, Greece. Again, another group supports the American University in Cairo.

Athens College was founded at a period which in its violent political and economic fluctuations recalls the situation of today. Greece was engaged in an almost continuous warfare from 1911 until 1922. Then, in the wake of the defeat by Turkey in 1922, 1,500,000 refugees were dumped into this small country.

In those days a group of public-spirited Athenians realized the necessity of an improvement in Greece's educational system as a basis for the moral rejuvenation of the country. In 1925 Greek benefactors furnished the campus and the buildings of Athens College at a cost of $600,000, while the American board raised an endowment of the same amount. A faculty of Americans and Greeks began to work on building an institution which would imbue American ideas of education in this most enlightened people of the Levant, meticulously observing, however, the fundamentals of Greek mentality and spirit. The college began in 1925 as a private house with 15 students. At present the campus at Psychico can board 600 students, while the Athens campus houses another 100. There are 63 members of the faculty, of whom 10 are Americans.

Nothing characterizes better the popularity of the college than the fact that last year 3000 applicants had to be turned down and that the list of applicants for admission is full right up to the end of 1954—provided the college can raise funds badly required to maintain its educational mission.

This correspondent, who for a year and a half toured Russian-occupied Europe, is firmly convinced that within a few years the Communist-ruled satellites will rid themselves of their present rulers. The future leaders of that new eastern Europe will come from these colleges. The ideas of the police state imbued into the Communists in the Lenin Institute will be replaced by the future leaders of free states—leaders who learned their ideas in these colleges.

When I visited Sofia last year, I had the opportunity to talk to the secretary of one of the "big bosses." The young lady was highly intelligent and in her fluent English one could feel, "between the lines," her enthusiasm for American ideas.

"Where did you learn your English? Where did you come across American ideas?" I asked.

Coyly she answered:

"I was studying at the American College at Simeonovo."

This college is now closed. But the buildings still stand and many a Bulgarian remembers the days when he spent happy times on this magnificent campus.

Once upon a time Roberts College on the Bosphorus educated Greeks, Macedonians, Bulgarians, Serbs and Turks. Now the pupils are mostly Turkish, but many of the old pupils still live and remember . . .

The leaders of Syria and Lebanon today are pupils of the American colleges of yesterday. Many leading personalities in Egypt's political and public life studied at the American University in Cairo . . .

But let's go back to Psychico and Athens College. I had the opportunity to eat with the students in their dining room. The students vary from the age of 9 up to 19. When they graduate, their grade corresponds to junior college. Many of them go to Columbia University in New York or to other American colleges from here; while those who want to become future engineers of Greece try to get into MIT, or other American technological schools, after their graduation.

About half of the students are sons of rich people and pay high fees. Another half live on scholarships, the funds for which are being raised in the States by the Near East College Association. About 40 orphans of the Albanian war are being admitted to the school on scholarship basis.

Among the great Greek benefactors of Athens College we must name the late Emmanuel A. Benaki, a rich Greek from Alexandria, Egypt, and his son-in-law, Stephanos Delta, the single largest donor to the college, who is now 87 years of age.

The president of the college is Dr. Homer W. Davis of Coram, Long Island. He studied at Hamilton College and at the University of California. He taught for four years at Roberts College in Turkey, and then in 1925 it was his idea to start a college in Greece based on American principles. Dr. Davis is the brother-in-law of John Ehrhardt, who until recently was political adviser of the State Department, with the American Forces in Austria.

'Fire Society' New Menace

Peiping, June 30 (AP).—An organization new to Chinese country life is spreading terror and poverty among villages reoccupied by the government after Communist withdrawals, a government official said today.

Pei Wen-chung, a researcher for the National Geographic Commission, said the organization is the "Fire Society," made up of "jobless and tramping elements of the countryside" who formerly masqueraded under such names as "The Loyal People's Home-Returning Society," "The Volunteer Young Men's Squad," and similar patriotic-sounding titles.

Many of these people were employed during the Japanese occupation as agents of the Japanese police, he said. After the Japanese surrendered, they caught on as guides for the Chinese government army.

"Whenever the national army comes to mop up a place," he said, "it is the 'Fire Society' members who point out which village is a 'bandit' hideout and thus should be dealt a heavy blow, or who is a 'bandit' and should be killed."

UNRRA Closes Its Books

London, June 30 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Lowell W. Rooks, director general of UNRRA, closed the books today on distribution of nearly three billion dollars worth of food and supplies to the peoples of 17 war-devastated countries as the world's greatest relief organization went out of business.

Rooks said that while the vast organization had not achieved economic recovery, "collapse has certainly so far been avoided."

The director warned, however, that in many cases starvation was averted by only the narrowest of margins, and asserted that more help would be needed "to prevent collapse in the European countries hardest hit by the war."

"A special United Nations committee has estimated foreign exchange deficits of 583 million dollars are necessary to prevent collapse in the European countries hardest hit by the war," Rooks said.

"These and other post-UNRRA requirements in Europe and the Far East will have to be met in some way if the world is to get back on its feet."

Rooks said that the "threat of hunger and the possibility of general economic collapse remain before us . . . The most hopeful estimates of crops this year show prospective dietary standards far from adequate."

The director said UNRRA had expended one billion dollars to help rehabilitate the internal economics of stricken countries. Of this, he said, 450 million dollars had been devoted to supplies essential to vital distribution, 200 million dollars for agricultural equipment, seed, draft animals and tractors, and 160 million dollars for medical supplies and drugs.

Soviet Ideas on Marshall Plan Split Big 3 Paris Conference

of the conference should be limited to determining how much American aid each individual European country needed.

Molotov declared that the proposals would result in an attempt at interference in the internal affairs of European nations and would impose the will of great powers on smaller countries, the British source said.

The Soviet minister then reverted to the Russian demand—as expressed by Tass—that European countries establish the extent of their needs and ask the United States to alleviate those needs.

Bevin's plan called for surveys to determine to what extent European reconstruction could be achieved through self-aid, and how much external assistance would be needed.

The external assistance, the British plan specified, would consist of capital goods to increase production and essential goods, such as food and coal, to "enable the economic life of Europe to be carried on while indigenous production is being increased."

Any consultations in regard to Germany, should be made through the commanders in chief of the four occupation zones of that country, Bevin specified.

Tass said decisions on Germany came under the scope of the "Big Four" foreign ministers and not the conference here.

Under the British plan, subcommittees would study Europe's needs in the fields of agriculture, food, coal, power, iron and steel and transport.

The question of balance of payments and raw materials would be handled by the steering committee, to be composed of representatives of France, Russia, Britain and not more than four other countries.

The British plan specified that this committee would "be in contact" with the governments of all European countries except Spain, and with the United Nations and any other appropriate intergovernmental organization.

Bevin emphasized that the Marshall plan envisaged a great deal of self-help on the part of Europe. He refuted the Russian suggestion that the sovereignty of European countries would be endangered.

"The Soviet delegation have suggested a different approach," Bevin said. "They wish to deal only with the requirements of European countries and not to deal also with the part European countries themselves can take in promoting European recovery.

"It seems as clear to me as anything can be that if we approach this in the manner suggested by the Soviet delegation, the help which is so necessary for a rapid recovery in Europe will not be forthcoming from the United States."

French Halt Revolt Plot

year, when police informers in central France tipped off police to a clandestine rightist organization in Britany.

Arms Cache Found

The secret "police of the realm" went into action, and their investigation resulted in the arrest six days ago of an obscure country editor of a weekly newspaper, the Count de Vulpian.

A search of the count's chateau at Lamballe, in Brittany, led to the discovery of numerous compromising documents—including the "blue plan" and a list of persons who were to form the dictatorial military directorate—and an "important" arms cache.

Loustaneau-Lacau

Vulpian confessed everything, the minister declared, and his information led to the arrest of Loustauneau-Lacaus, General Guillaudot, Abbe Raux of the Lamballe Abbey, Marc Jacquot, described as a Paris wine merchant, and Mrs. Maurice de Waleffe, 70, Paris widow, who subsequently was released in provisional liberty because of her advanced age.

These were the only names Depreux would make public. He said he was unable to estimate the total number of arrests.

Army Units Investigated

He said the documents seized showed the plotters felt they could count on the support of armored units of the French army in Brittany and in the French zone of occupied Germany. Both of these units now are being investigated.

Signal for the uprising, which has to take place after a campaign to convince the populace of the imminence of a Communist putsch, was to be an attack on the Cannes prison, where the rightist resistance leader Crete is incarcerated. It was not known whether Crete was implicated in the plot.

Without mentioning names, the minister said that some of the persons under investigation had attempted unsuccessfully to worm their way into Gen. Charles de Gaulle's rightist organization, the French People's Rally. No link was reported, however, between that group and the Black Maquis.

Sensation Hinted

Depreux hinted at a more sensational announcement later, and said "we intend to push our investigation to its final conclusion no matter how important a personage is found to be involved."

The newspaper L'Intransigeant said it had learned that the plotters intended to assassinate Gen. de Gaulle in the hope the Communists would be blamed.

Meanwhile reporters who attempted to see Madame de Waleffe at her Paris apartment met with a cold and brief reception.

"I know absolutely nothing of the whole business," she said, and slammed her door.

Political Arrests In Romania Bring British Protest

London, June 30.—C. P. Mayhew, foreign office under-secretary, circulated in the Commons today the text of a British note of protest delivered last Wednesday to the Romanian government, which accused Romania of breaking its peace with the Allies.

British public opinion is "shocked" at the "indiscriminate" arrests by the Romanian authorities of their political opponents, the note said. The note asserted that these arrests of "old men, priests, professors, students and others who in many cases, have no political affiliations" are "a denial of the human rights specifically guaranteed under article three of the treaty."

Mayhew said no reply had been received.

He said it was not Britian's intention to withhold ratification of the treaty.

Building Permits Set Record in Miami Beach

Miami Beach, Fla., June 30 (AP).—Building permits in Miami Beach reached the highest level for June in the city's history when construction valued at $2,967,140 was authorized.

Chief Building Inspector G. J. Carrey declared:

"I estimate that we will reach more than 35 million dollars in permits for the year with building controls lifted."

3 Killed, 3 Injured As Grenade Explodes

Lisbon, Portugal, June 30 (AP).—A grenade 20 years old blew up in a museum today, killing three employes and injuring three other workers.

Domingo Costa had thrown a lighted cigarette stub into a seemingly empty grenade case, which was near a pile of antique munitions. Costa was among those killed.

Blackmail and Murder to Spare

'Unfaithful' Mixes Up Too Many Subplots in Study of War Marriage

By Richard L. Coe

LIKE YOU KNOW WHAT, "The Unfaithful," at the Earle, is sinewed with good intentions. But the result is not very satisfactory.

Of all the Hollywood studios, Warner Brothers is the one which most prides itself on recognizing contemporary themes. In "The Unfaithful" they present several, each of which might have made a compelling story. But the idea becomes far too confused and confusing.

Ann Sheridan

The finale's mildly ringing words ultimately come out against divorce and urge people not to give up on marriage until they've fought through to understanding.

This trick of coming out as a champion of the obvious is one of the movies' most endearing traits. Not even the Archbishop of Canterbury could find fault with a movie that winds up with impassioned pleas against divorce.

Because it begins and ends on this note, divorce is not the picture's only theme. It also tackles a much more problematical one. It states, and with evident sympathy, the plight of the woman who had a brief fling at romance while her husband was overseas.

Now this, surely, is an interesting and real problem. But in stating it, the film dips into murder and blackmail, two more subjects which stand on their own as good movie material. Thus the story is a purely surface one, never actually getting under the skin of the woman and her husband's stock reaction. By dressing it up with murder, blackmail and a courtroom trial, the problem itself is lost in the melee.

"THE UNFAITHFUL." Warner Brothers release; produced by Jerry Wald. Screenplay by David Goodis and James Gunn. Directed by Vincent Sherman. At the Earle Theater.

Misplaced Cartoons

And then, to supposedly strengthen the drama, subsidiary characters are introduced, all larger than life and dwarfing what is essentially a delicate situation. Few women are so amusing as the acidulous Eve Arden, but she and her gossipy friends are sheer caricature as used in this story and don't jibe in the least with it.

First, the focus is on a divorce party of Eve. Then you settle on Ann Sheridan, whose husband is out of town for a few days, but Ann's living for his return. As she lets herself into their darkened home, a man sneaks out of the bushes. Ann screams. Silence and behind-doors scuffling.

Then you discover Ann has killed the man, whom she denies knowing. Then the blackmail angle comes up and you are assured that the wife was not a spotless female, which the film excuses in these choice words: "Two and a half years in the South Pacific isn't so bad. Try it on Wiltshire Boulevard."

How the husband learns, denies forgiveness and finally melts consumes the rest of the hour and 50 minutes' running time. But before it's over you have little sympathy left for anybody.

The problem suggests the comparative one of "Brief Encounter." The English film made its point far more effectively with understatement and subtlety. But Warners, bless 'em, have a heart as big as their Burbank studios and just can't resist such searing drama as murder, blackmail and the housing shortage.

It's all a question, then, of setting up entirely too many strawmen for one theme. You're supposed to like Ann because she's fundamentally honest. You're supposed to like Lawyer Lew Ayres because he's against divorce. You're supposed to like Husband Zachary Scott because he's attacking the housing shortage and Did His Part as a Soldier.

The acting is considerably better integrated than the screenplay by David Goodis and James Gunn. Miss Sheridan's simplicity is her strong point and the picture's best feature. The two men are adequate. But the supporting roles are medium grade ham.

Good intentions, also, don't make movies.

Robert Ryan, 'Crossfire' Hit, Gets Stardom in Boxing Film

By Hedda Hopper

Hollywood.—Robert Ryan so impressed his RKO bosses with his performance as the killer in "Crossfire" that he has been handed the starring role in "The Set-Up." The latter, a prize fight story written by Joseph Moncure March, will be produced by Richard Goldstein. It deals with a pugilist whose crooked backers insist on his throwning a fight near the end of his ring career. He wins the bout, however, and gets himself in heavy trouble . . . Ryan was the undefeated heavyweight champion during his four years at Dartmouth. During the war he never got overseas, because he had to spend 2½ years teaching boxing to marines in training camps . . . He's terrific in "Crossfire"; so is Bob Mitchum and Bob Young. In fact, there isn't a dull performance in the picture. Every minute of it is exciting. The film is the first one to openly indict anti-Semitism in America. And I predict that it will receive more conflicting criticisms than any picture that we've made in ages . . . In the very first shot, "Crossfire" grips your interest, because you see a man beaten to death merely because he's a Jew. And he's killed by any Army veteran still wearing his uniform. It's not a pretty sight, but the film has a mighty telling effect.

Robert Ryan

A Fire Hazard

However, there's a possibility that "Crossfire" may backfire. I still don't think that placing emphasis on race is the best way to fight intolerance. I believe that the subtle and entertaining propaganda Leo McCarey and Bing Crosby put over in "Going My Way" is more effective. The same thing may be said of "The Jolson Story." After seeing the latter picture, you won't leave the theater saying "the film was about a Jewish family." Rather you say "What a wonderful family!" Christians won't love Jews—or Jews Christians—just because a film tells them to. You love people, regardless of race or creed, because they're fine American citizens, adn because of their contributions to our country and to humanity.

No, It Isn't So

It has been reported that Olivia DeHavilland can say who will, or will not appear in "The Snake Pit" with her. But she doesn't have that authority. Cast approval still remains the prerogative of bossman Darryl Zanuck. Just now Mark Stevens and Richard Conte are testing for the male lead roles in the picture . . . The announcement that "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" would be refilmed by Allied Artists must have been premature, to say the least. Jess Smith, who represents the agency handling the rights to the John Fox Jr. books, tell me that the novel is not in public domain. He's buying the silent picture rights to the story from Warners. John Ford, Walter Wanger, and David Selznick are all interested in the yarn.

One Word Led to Another—

Scuttlebutt in forms me that a top male star threw his whole studio into an uproar when he showed up late for work after the lunch hour the other day. The incident grew to such proportions that the top boss was called in, only to be informed by the star that he could take the studio and dump it in the Pacific ocean as far as he was concerned. Yet I remember in the old days when a star got in a romantic mood, the director would stop the picture and have an orchestra brought in to play her favorite tunes for an hour. When shooting was resumed, the director got twice as much work out of her, because she loved the guy. . . Hank Fonda likes home cooking so well that he brings his lunch along with him to the studio and eats on the sound stage with the "Daisy Kenyon" crew. O, to be a fly on the wall and hear the stories those boys swap while stowing their victuals.

An Excellent Head On a Story to Come

New York—Some newspapermen in the Stork Club the other night were discussing freak-assignments, and one of them told of the late Frank Ward O'Malley who entered the city room one day and found his editor eagerly waiting for him. "For two weeks," said the editor, "I've been fooling around with a headline, now I think I got it" . . . O'Malley listened, and the editor told him the headline: "Hocus Pocus In Hohokus" . . . "And now," said the editor, "I want you to go over to Hohokus—it's just across the river, in Bergen County—interview the mayor, talk to the cops, dig up something we can use to fit that headline."

The first U. N. office to function under non-Russian control in Moscow will be the U. N.'s Information Center. Jerry Shapiro, director of the U. N.'s Overseas Information Office, went to Moscow last week, saw Molotov and arranged for the opening of the office. The Soviet government notified him that either a Frenchman or a Swedish subject will be acceptable as office-head

George Raft, who volunteered to appear at the inquest of Bugsy Siegel, never masked his friendship for the late mob-chief . . . A few years ago, at the height of the campaign in behalf of the Scottsboro boys in Alabama, a committee raising funds for the preservation of civil rights went to Hollywood to raise funds for the Scottsboro defense. One of them approached Raft . . . "Why should I give any dough to you guys?" Raft replied, "I don't see any of you guys around when they tried to put Bugsy in the can."

Murvyn Vye, the screen actor who in the past few weeks has been escorting the prettiest girls in town to the N. Y. night clubs, was told that he'd have to grow a beard for his role in "Girl of the Golden West," which opens next week. Vye agreed to grow the beard, reluctantly. "This means a realistic performance," the director consoled him. Vye sighed: "It also means I'll have to rearrange my social life" . . . Luis Valmore Rodriguez, ex-Cabinet Minister from Venezuela, is here to observe the Arms Theft Trial for his government. Rodriguez is an ex-U. S. Army sergeant.

In "The Hucksters," Adlophe Menjou portrays a selfish, frightened, friendless, drunken advertising executive. Frederick Wakeman, who wrote the story, worked for a top advertising agency here and caricatured his employers in his book. When Wakeman resigned he gave a dinner party in honor of the executive on whom he based the Menjou role, and gave this man a $400 clock "because of my respect and affection" . . . Richard Korn, the conductor, will leave for the Middle East after his Lewisohn Stadium concerts . . . When Tallulah Bankhead starts her tour, Stephen Cole will be her stage-manager. Cole has worked with Miss Bankhead in all her shows for the past eight years, except for the period when he served in India with the American Field Service. When he was asked how he got into the theatrical profession, Cole confided: "I got in because Miss Bankhead needed a fourth at bridge."

Sid Grauman, owner of the much-publicized Chinese Theater, is one of the most persistent practical jokers in show business. When a neighbor tried to enlist his aid in a municipal cause, and Grauman told him: "Come to my office at the theater tomorrow. I'll have every municipal officer there, and you can present your case to them" . . . From the basement, where he storing a wax museum for someone, Grauman took the wax figures and placed them around the long table in his office. Grauman dimmed the lights. Then his neighbor arrived, addressed his pleas to the "city officials," swung his arm in gesticulation—and heard a thud. He discovered that he had knocked the head off of Abraham Lincoln.

Milton Reynolds, the pen manufacturer who holds the round-the-world speed record, told a group of airline executives at the Sheraton last week about his plans to break his record . . . In his first flight Reynolds had to take a longer route than did Howard Hughes, because he couldn't get permission to stop in Russia. This time Reynolds sent a cable to Stalin, requesting permission. He then received a call to come to the Soviet Embassy in Washington . . . There he was told that if reporters accompany him on the flight, no Hearst, McCormick or Patterson men would be acceptable. "But," said Reynolds, "all we'd do is stop at Yakutsk in Siberia for a few minutes for re-fueling." "That would be all they'd need," the Soviet official replied, "to write a book on 'Russia, as I Saw It.'"

World Bank Offers Two Bond Issues

Philadelphia, June 30 (AP).—The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development today filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission covering two bond issues covering $250,000,000.

The issues include a 10-year 2¼ per cent bond and a 25-year 3 per cent bond, but the exact amounts of each were not disclosed. The 10-year bonds will be due July 15, 1957 while the 25-year issue will be due July 15, 1972.

Net proceeds of the sale will be used for the bank's general lending operation.

The statment said the offering of the bonds will be made with the cooperation of securities dealers throughout the United States, but that the offering will not be underwritten and the bank does not intend to offer bonds for sale except through dealers.

The application of the Commonwealth of Australia for membership has been approved by the bank's board of governors.

The registration statement said the bonds will state on their face that they are not the obligations of any government.

Interest on the 10-year bonds will be payable at the rate of 2¼ per cent per annum, semiannually on January 15 and July 15 of each year with the first payment to be made on January 15, 1948.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—The July corn futures delivery climbed back above $2 a bushel today in active buying that boosted prices more than 4 cents a bushel at times. Wheat and oats also were strong.

July corn sold up to 2.00¾, compared with the record peak of 2.03½ set last Thursday. Corn and oats buying was based on continued heavy rainfall in flood-ridden Iowa, and also in Nebraska and Illinois, and trade reports that corn growth generally is so slow that excellent growing conditions are needed.

Commission houses were active wheat buyers, apparently based on the belief that the Government will continue active purchasing for export. The Government bought more than two million bushels over the weekend, paying 2.25 for July shipment.

Wheat closed 2 to 3⅛ cents higher than the previous finish, July 2.18¾@2.19; corn was up 2¾ to 4, July 2.00½@2.00¾, and oats were 1 to 2⅝ higher, July 98½@98⅝.

Week's Steel Rate Tumbles to 72%

New York, June 30 (AP).—A sharp decline in steel output this week is indicated, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today, estimating current operations were scheduled at 72 per cent of rated capacity, equivalent to 1,259,900 net tons.

This compares with operations at 75.6 per cent, equal to 1,672,900 tons last week. The institute attributed the curtailment to the shutdown of coal mines.

A month ago the industry operated at 97 per cent of capacity, producing around 1,697,400 net tons, while a year ago the rate was 87.2 per cent and production 1,536,800 tons.

New York Cotton

New York, June 30 (AP).—Cotton futures registered gains of 15 to 90 cents a bale in moderately active trading today. Prices at one time dipped 50 cents a bale under the previous close on considerable profit-taking, but the general trend was upward on persistent covering in nearby July, along with mill and commission-house buying.

The market drew support from Washington advices that differences over the form of the cotton-buying program for Japan had been settled. This was expected to expedite further Government buying of the staple for that country.

Cargill Asks Review Of 10-Million Suit

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—Cargill, Inc., Minneapolis Grain Brokers, today asked the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals to review its suit against the Chicago Board of Trade for treble damages in excess of $10,000,000.

The suit was dismised last week by district judge Elwyn R. Shaw.

The Cargill action contended the board's action in freezing grain futures prices last year was illegal. Judge Shaw ruled the freeze was legal and necessary to prevent "exorbitant profits."

Visible Grain Supply

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—The visible supply of wheat decreased 535,000 bushels to 12,802,000 bushels the past week, the Board of Trade reported today. Corn decreased 1,489,000 to 9,478,000; oats increased 587,000 to 3,942,000; rye decreased 86,000 to 609,000; barley decreased 574,000 to 5,872,000; and soy beans decreased 608,000 to 2,138,000 bushels.

IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT regarding the newest feature available for the Scott radio-phonograph

A great new gift to lovers of recorded music

It's Scott's special adaptation of a radically new Dynamic Noise and Scratch Suppressor! It makes old records sound new, new shellac records sound like Vinylites, and modern high-fidelity Vinylite records sound superb! Come in and hear it perform on the "world's finest radio-phonograph" soon.*

The more sensitive your ear, and the finer your phonograph, the worse the needle scratch and other surface noises in a record are bound to sound.

So, for the world's finest radio-phonograph, no ordinary noise and scratch suppressor would do.

It's a "postwar miracle" come true!

When a radically new dynamic noise suppressor was developed which, unlike prewar methods, did not attenuate or "kill" the highs—those overtones which give music its color—the Scott Radio Laboratories acted without delay—not to improve the instrument but to improve the playing quality and lengthen the life of even the oldest records.

This Dynamic Noise and Scratch Suppressor is built with typical Scott watch-like precision and is adaptable only to a Scott instrument and is not available in any other instrument. It is sold and installed only by Scott franchised dealers. No other type of scratch suppressor is designed for or adapted to the Scott.

What it does—and how

This Dynamic Noise and Scratch Suppressor is actually an electronic "filter" that screens out noise frequencies—high and low—but lets the music through. And because the ear hears less noise, it hears more music!

Hearing is believing

The way really to enjoy a demonstration of this near-human electronic wonder is to listen to one of your own favorite old records played on a new Scott radio-phonograph. No instrument built will reproduce every sound on that record more faithfully than the Scott (that means needle scratch too, when the Suppressor is not connected).

Then you yourself can snap on the Suppressor and listen to the change. It is truly amazing—thrilling to a sensitive, music-loving ear.

Come in and listen!

No matter whether you own a Scott, plan to buy one, or merely want to hear one, come in and try it if you love fine music and hate needle scratch!

June Clearings Set 1947 Peak Of 289 Million

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington bank clearings in June aggregated $289,678,922, a new high for the year and the second best total on record. Peak in check transactions was reached in December, 1946, when the figure soared to $298,322,943.

The month's clearings were $29,974,997 or 11 per cent higher than in the same 1946 month, according to records of George H. Bright, manager of the Washington Clearing House Association.

Continued high business level here and second quarterly Federal income tax payments were the two main reasons attributed for the June increase.

For the first six months, check writings set an all-time peak of $1,635,637,432 as compared with $1,495,759,193 in the like period last year.

Clearings by months compared as follows:

January	$282,970,821	$257,680,197
February	259,049,317	214,598,191

New Labor Act Reaction: Wait

Immediate local reaction to the Taft-Hartley Labor Act was found to be a matter of suspended anticipation.

Spokesmen for both local industry and labor agreed yesterday they were waiting to see what happened elsewhere around the country, and that for the time being at least, management-union relationships would continue as they have been.

Henry Beitscher, president of the CIO Industrial Union Council, said that the local CIO governing body had discussed possible problems at a meeting last week, and had set up machinery for keeping member unions informed of new problems growing out of operation of the new labor law.

The AFL unions are awaiting word from international headquarters on what action to take, according to Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the AFL Central Labor Union here.

He pointed out that AFL attorneys conferred here last weekend, and that next week, the international officers of the AFL were to meet and discuss action on the new law.

William Press, secretary of the Board of Trade, said that the District didn't have any sizable number of industrial plants, where, he expects, the first reaction to the new labor law will be felt.

Dope Trade Fought

Mexico City, June 30 (U.P.).—President Miguel Aleman entered the fight against big-time dope racketeers today, ordering the attorney general's office to intensify activity against smugglers who hope to move 66 million dollars worth of narcotics into the United States this year.

'Very Long Time' Of Peace Predicted By Montgomery

Sydney, Australia, June 30 (U.P.).—Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British imperial staff, said today that he did not believe there would be another war "for a very long time.

"We had a tremendous storm throughout the world and the waves are taking a long time to calm down," Montgomery said in a speech at Darwin. "But they are growing less now although they are taking their time."

"However, I think this means they are settling down properly and there will not be more storms for a very long time."

Montgomery, who is on tour of British Far East bases, then added: "I am fed up with war."

'Not Too Far Away'

Weathermen For Industry Predicted

Weather analysts for industry and pin-point tornado-tracking by radar were predicted yesterday by the chief of the AAF's Air Weather Service.

Brig. Gen. Donald N. Yates, the man who selected "D-Day," talked about past, present and future weather on occasion of the Service's 10 the anniversary under the Army Air Forces.

He told a news conference that some day—"not too far away"—the country's big industries will install weather service for their own purposes; technical men who can analyze information supplied by the Weather Bureau.

Further research which will enable radar to forecast, track and estimate wind velocity of tornadoes "will come along soon." He told of National Airport's radar picking up a thunderstorm north of Baltimore and how an operator advised Baltimore "you'll have a storm up there in 15 minutes." They did.

The joint efforts of the United States Weather Bureau, the Air Weather Service and the Navy's aerological section in keeping pace with world weather also were told by the general.

"The Air Service," he explained, "is a specialized operation specifically for military operations. It is not a part of, nor in competition with the Weather Bureau. Rather, we are part of a weather pool with the other two agencies."

Stop Births, Europe Advised

New York, June 30 (AP).—Mrs. Margaret Sanger Slee, director of the Birth Control Research Bureau, today advocated a ten-year moratorium on births in the hungry countries of Europe, including England.

Adults "should not bring children into the world to starve," she said as she boarded an airplane to attend a conference on family planning at Oxford, England, July 21 to 26.

Sweden Clamps Full Secrecy About Nazi Escape Ring Trial; Order to Keep Records Closed for 10 Years Is Reported

Malmo, Sweden, June 30 (U.P.).—Swedish authorities today clamped complete secrecy around the trial of two alleged key figures in an international Nazi smuggling ring that may have engineered the escape of German war leaders to South America.

Unofficial police sources hinted that Martin Bormann, Hitler's missing deputy whose death was never proved, may have been one of "the unexpectedly large number of Nazi leaders" who passed through Sweden en route to South America about six months ago.

The official reason for barring press and public from the trial—which is taking place in the town of Ystad in southern Sweden—was "the necessity for avoiding communication with foreign powers."

The defendants are Richard Kruegher, former Luftwaffe pilot, and Sixten Haage, Swedish student. Police said published reports of their arrests tipped off other members of the smuggling ring and enabled them to go into hiding or escape from the country.

Unofficial reports said the trial ended last Saturday and the defendants were found guilty, but the court delayed sentencing for six days and the trial records were ordered kept closed for 10 years.

Police also said that newspaper stories about the discovery of a large-scale passport forgery operation in Helsingborg last week "threatened to spoil years of work in the smuggling affair."

Swedish police, "in cooperation with Danish and Allied authorities, are now on the trail of a strong international Nazi underground league that helped more Nazis than Sweden ever dreamed about" to flee through Denmark and Sweden to the Western Hemisphere, a reliable source said.

This same source said police had discovered that large sums of money from abroad had poured into Sweden to finance the smuggling ring. So far, he said, only subordinate members of the underground organization had been arrested in Sweden and Denmark, and "the leaders are still free."

China Plans All-Out War Against Reds

Nanking, June 30 (AP).—Chinese government leaders in a five-hour closed session with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek decided today to order complete mobilization of manpower and resources for total gloves-off warfare with the Communists, highly-informed sources reported.

(The complete mobilization apparently is a tightening up process, as the nation long has been on a full war footing.)

Two government armies, the new Sixth and the Ninty-third, plus an unidentified division, entered smouldering Szepingkai, Manchuria, from the south shortly after 10 a. m.

While reported in retreat east and west from the railway, the Communists retained the initiative with a thrust from southeast Jehol Province around Chaoyang, 150 miles west of Mukden.

Ninety miles southwest of Peiping, Communists were reported attacking the suburbs of Paoting, Hopeh provincial capital.

Soviet Plans Delay On Hungary Pact

Budapest, June 30 (AP).—A Moscow broadcast in Hungarian said today the supreme Soviet had closed its current session and that ratification of the Hungarian peace treaty would be taken up at the next session, scheduled for September.

Hungarian political circles speculated that the Russians would not ratify the treaty until after elections which this country, now under a Communist-influenced regime, is tentatively slated to hold in September.

3 Yankees, Pails Left at Wimbledon

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IF YANKEE PRESIDENT Larry MacPhail were deliberately trying to provoke trouble with the baseball commissioner's office, he could have made no better stab at it than his latest reported act—offering his ballplayers $100 suits of clothes if they "won four of their next five games."

POVICH

It's a case for Commissioner Chandler who is put squarely on the spot once more by MacPhail's doings, and unless Chandler lacks the gumption of the late Judge Landis, MacPhail will be told to back down. Landis a few years ago set the shining precedent for firm action by Chandler when he cracked down on rich Walter O. Briggs of the Detroit Tigers for a bonus offer.

That was the time when Briggs, elated by the success of his club on an Eastern trip, told the athletes to visit his New York tailor and be outfitted for $100 suits of clothes at Mr. Briggs' expense. Commissioner Landis spouted a quick "no," and told Briggs he would countenance no such midseason honorariums by the Detroit owner. Whereupon Briggs hastily called the deal off.

AS MacPHAIL'S OFFER reached this department, he telephoned Manager Bucky Harris on Thursday from his Maryland farm that the Yankee owners would pick up the bill for the new suits if the players won four of their next five games. The offer was apparently in the nature of a bracer after the club's 4-2 defeat by the Athletics that day. Anyway, the Yankees proceeded to win three of their next four with the bonus finally riding on the result of last night's game with the second-place Red Sox at Boston.

When Landis cracked down on Briggs, he did it arbitrarily without recourse to any rule in the book, but he made himself very clear nevertheless. Landis declared such offers constituted "extra and unfair incentives" to the ballplayers and was a handicap to the less wealthy clubs in the league. The richer teams, he pointed out, were in a position to offer inducements denied the poorer clubs.

If Landis was backed by no rule, at least his authority wasn't questioned. He could always rely on his power to determine what actions were "detrimental to the best interests" of the game. Chandler relinquished a bit of the Landis power when he took office, but he insisted on the prerogative of being sole judge of any detrimental acts, and thus is in a position to crack down on MacPhail if he chooses.

CHANDLER WOULD SEEM to have even more cause to bat MacPhail down than Landis had in the Briggs case. The Briggs offer was merely in the nature of a reward for nice play already accomplished, but MacPhail held out the expensive clothes as a prize to be won or lost in the next five games. It was seemingly an act to spur the play of the Yankees, an even more flagrant a violation of the Landis ruling.

President Will Harridge of the American League was interested enough in the MacPhail bonus offer to telephone Washington yesterday for more details. He said it would be a matter for action by his office if MacPhail had violated any league rule, but he was of the opinion that injunctions against midseason bonuses covered only attempts to spur a team into a World Series with the promise of extra awards in the form of cash or worldly goods.

Harridge did agree that Commissioner Chandler had the authority to act without respect to any book rules if he considered MacPhail's offer detrimental to the best interests of the game. "Our league is also interested," he said, "and I am checking the language of the rulings we adopted last February covering extra inducements to the ballplayers."

WHETHER MacPHAIL based his offer merely on winning four out of the five next games or on getting into the World Series, shouldn't make much difference in the view of both Harridge and Chandler. A number of victories over any short stretch of the season could have a definite bearing on any club's pennant fate and could be considered as an inducement to win the pennant, which I always thought was tantamount to getting into a World Series.

It could be pointed out, of course, that Branch Rickey last season promised the Brooklyn Dodger players 26 new automobiles as a reward for their play during the year, but that happened after the season was finished. Rickey's act was no different than the permissible action of giving a player a $2000 bonus, or more, if the club owner considered he was due it at the end of a good year. Mickey Vernon got a $2000 bonus from Clark Griffith shortly after the season ended.

What happened in the last Chandler-MacPhail session when MacPhail was called on the carpet in Cincinnati for spouting publicly after being told to comment no more on the Leo Durocher suspension, never has been revealed. Chandler withheld any statement except to say informally that he expected no more trouble from MacPhail. Now what?

Nats Lead Macks, 5-4, In Seventh

BULLETIN

The Nats came up with a three-run rally in the last of the seventh to take a 5-4 lead over the Philadelphia Athletics going into the eighth inning last night at Griffith Stadium.

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Connie Mack's Athletics unleashed a three-hit barrage against Bobo Newsom in the seventh inning at Griffith Stadium last night to take a 4-2 lead over the Nats.

It all happened after two were out.

Ferris Fain drew a walk, Sam Chapman singled to center, Fain taking third. Buddy Rosar then parked one of Bobo's pitches into center field for a single, scoring Fain and Chapman went to second.

That was all for Newsom and Ray Scarbourough came into pitch.

Pete Suder slapped the first Scarbourough pitch to left center for a triple and two more runs were across the plate. Hank Majeski finally grounded out to end the big inning.

Up to that point the Nats were leading 2-1 and Bobo had seemed to have things under control.

The 18,000 fans saw the Nats inning after Eddie Yost greeted move into a 1-0 lead in the first Dick Fowler with a two-bagger to center.

Yost reached third while Catcher Buddy Rosar was throwing out Lewis at first on a third strike and he flashed home on Vernon's grounder to Suder.

Newsom encountered no trouble

Newsom encountered no trouble from ahe A's until the third and then got a tremendous lift from Mickey Vernon to escape damage.

The A's filled the bases after Majeski led off with a double against the right field wall. With two out, Newsom hit McCosky and walked Valo, but in this crisis Vernon stretched high in the air to grab a fierce liner off Fain's bat for the third out.

Newsom dashed the Nats own hopes of scoring a run in the third inning when he bunted into a double play after Al Evans led off with a single.

Through the fourth and fifth Newsom continued to blank the A's, but the Nats muffed a scoring chance in the fourth after Vernon doubled with one out.

Newsom himself drove in a run that upped the Nats' lead to 2-0 in the fifth. Priddy's safe bunt and Evans' single to center put men on first and third with one out, and Newsom drove a long fly to left to score Priddy.

The Athletics packed three hits into the sixth inning to get a run back against Newsom who was delivered from immediate trouble by a Vernon-to-Travis-to-Vernon double playafte r Chapman opened with a single.

Suder renewed the A's attack with a single to right and moved to second on Majeski's walk. Pinch-hitter George Binks batted for Fowler and dumped a single to left, scoring Suder. Newsom retired the side on Joost's fly to Spence near the centerfield wall.

The Babe Comes Home Wearing Kilts

British Champ Says 'I Won the Cup for George'

By Whitney Martin

NEW YORK, June 30 (AP).—Decked out like a Scotch lassie, from tam to kilts, Didrikson Zaharias arrived today on the Queen Elizabeth, with the huge silver cup emblematic of the British Women's Amateur Golf Championship, her prize piece of baggage.

"They told me to take it home, bring it back and take it home again," the stellar athlete, who is the first American-born to win the trophy, said as she placidly went through a routine of poses for cameramen and answered endless questions concerning her triumph.

There was no official reception, but her return brought out the biggest delegation of reporters and photographers to greet a returning celebrity since the war. Her husband, George Zaharias, a Denver sports promoter and former wrestler, was among those present, keeping in the background and beaming proudly. Finally lured into camera range, he went through what vaguely resembled a Highland fling with his golfing wife, his 300-odd pounds putting the sturdy deck to a severe strain.

* * * *

THE BABE had nothing but praise for her treatment by the Scots, who showed no obvious partiality, although, she added: "I knew on the last day that they wanted me to win because there wasn't a Scotchman in the finals."

"They'd get off their bicycles on the street to walk with me," she said, "and when they learned I had taken over only light weight clothes, they sent me coupons to buy things, long underwear, everything."

As to her game, Babe modestly admitted it was the best she ever played.

"I was off the fairway with only three drives in eight rounds," she said. "And I was in only three bunkers. I holed out one of the bunker shots and the other two were gimme putts. So I'm known as a bunker and iron player over there. They forget about those straight drives."

* * * *

THE gallery never applauded during a match, except once in a while when there was a sensational shot, like when I sank the shot from the bunker. However, after a match is over, the spectators stand there and clap their hands for about 10 minutes while you stand there wondering what to do, with chill bumps all over you.

"Winning the trophy was the biggest thrill of my life—up to right now," she continued. "I wish George could have been there so I could have handed the cup to him. I win all my cups for George." She put an arm affectionately across the massive shoulders as George grinned self-consciously.

"I'm a little tired of golf right now, and want to go to Denver and work in my rose garden. I'll defend my Women's National Amateur championship at Detroit September 22-27. I don't think I'll have time to compete in the Tam O'Shanter in Chicago. It starts July 3."

The British victory was the Babe's sixteenth consecutive competitive triumph. The ball she used in the final match in making golf history will rest in the U. S. G. A. museum.

"And St. Andrews wants my driver," she said.

Patty, Brown, Kramer in Semifinals

By Bill Mecklin

Wimbledon, England, June 30 (AP).—With unheralded Budge Patty turning in another astounding upset, a California trio reached the semifinal round in the men's singles of the All-England tennis championships today while four favored United States women advanced to the round of eight in their division.

Following up his triumph over second-seeded John Bromwich of Australia, the handsome, 23-year-old former GI from Los Angeles, downed formidable Jaroslav Dorbny of Czechoslovakia, 6—4, 7—9, 6—2, 6—3, despite a pulled leg muscle, and joined topranking Jack Kramer of Los Angeles, third-seeded Tom Brown of San Francisco, and fourth-seeded Dinny Pails of Australia in the last four.

An all-American semifinal in the men's play was prevented by Pails who ousted Lanky Bob Falkenburg of Los Angeles, 4—6, 4—6, 6—3, 6—0, 6—2.

Geoff Brown Swept Aside

Kramer, displaying the same deadly accuracy that he showed Australians in the Davis Cup challenge round, swept aside fifth-seeded Geoff Brown of Australia, 6—0, 6—1, 6—3.

Tom Brown, beaten in the semi-finals last year here by Yvon Petra who went on to capture the title, gained revenge today by routing the giant Frenchman in straight sets, 7—5, 6—2, 6—4. The 24-year old San Francisco law student made the 6-foot 7-inch Frenchman run all over the court and invariably passed him when Petra got out of position.

On Wednesday, Patty and Brown will have it out in one semifinal while Kramer will oppose Pails in the other. Judging by Kramer's terrific play here it will be an all-California final. Kramer blitzed Pails in three straight sets in the Davis Cup competition and rarely left the baseline during that rout.

Falkenburg, who took the first two sets from Pails and then suffered a cramp in the wrist of his racket hand in the third, took a booing from the crowd who did not know of his condition in the final sets. He declined to alibi saying "Pails just played the better."

While astounding the gallery, Patty also surprised himself. He was so doubtful of his chances to survive this long that he had made a plane reservation for Paris on Wednesday.

"I had no idea of winning today," Patty explained. "Everything is wrong with me. I've pulled a muscle in my right thigh; I have blisters on my hand and my right arm is groggy. The whole thing for me was anti-climactic after I'd beaten Bromwich. But when I took that second set I said to myself, 'Boy, you've got a chance'."

American Women March On

Meanwhile, the American women, led by top-seeded Margaret Osborne of San Francisco, moved up in unbroken ranks. Miss Osborne, tuned up her overhead game in whipping Mrs. Analis Rossi of Italy, 6—3, 7—5 and second-seeded Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., made fast work of Phyllis C. Grover, England, 6—0, 6—1.

Fourth-seeded Mrs. Pat Canning Todd of Hidden Valley, Calif., also had an easy time in eliminating Mrs. Betty Hilton of England, 6—1, 6—2.

Third-seeded Doris Hart of Miami, Fla., had the only tough battle of the day in turning back Mrs. Magda Rurak, the Romanian who holds a victory over Pauline Betz, top feminine amateur player of the world until she turned pro. Despite a side ailment, Mrs. Rurak fought gamely, but went down, 6—4, 8—6.

Tomorrow's semi-final contests will match Miss Hart and Mrs. Bostock; Miss Brough and Mrs. Bolton, Mrs. Todd and Mrs. Summers, and Mrs. Stammers and Miss Osborne.

Prison Pitcher Does Fadeout, But Only to Take a Swim

FAIRHOPE, ALA., June 30 (AP).—It was hot yesterday, much too hot for 23-year-old Virgil McGraw, star pitcher for the Atmore State Prison Farm baseball team.

The Fairhope nine was hitting his fast ball with regularity, so when he complained of being sick in the fifth inning, the team manager took him out.

The part Indian hurler, serving a 50-year-term and described by Warden S. W. Hixon as "the best pitcher in the prison system," lay down by a clump of bushes at the edge of the field to rest.

SOON he faded into the bushes. Several minutes later when his side needed him as a relief outfielder, McGraw's escape was discovered..

Bloodhounds from the prison farm traced him to the Fairhope bathing pier shortly before last midnight. There was McGraw, clad in a pair of bathing trunks, stretched full length on the pier, taking in the cool breeze from Mobile Bay.

He explained to Warden Hixon that he "just wanted to go in swimming."

Incidentally Fairhope won the ball game, 9-3.

Ghezzi Has Rough 79 in British Open

By Glen Williams

Hoylake, England, June 30 (AP).—The five-man Yankee bid to retain the British Open Golf championship got off to a ragged start today with one American, pro Vic Ghezzi, facing a stiff battle to join the select group of qualifiers for a chance at the crown.

At the end of the first of two days of qualifying play to pick the 100 top scorers, amateur Bob Sweeny, jr., a reserve player on the United States Walker Cup team, led the United States quintet and his sparkling 70 stood second only to the blistering 66 of Bert Gadd, British professional.

The rest of the Yankee squad, fighting to keep the crown won last year by Sam Snead, had these scores:

Frank Stranahan, Toledo amateur, 36—37—73.

John Bulla, professional and Phoenix, Ariz., airline pilot, 37—38—75.

Staff Sergt. Charles (Chuck) Jennings of Medford, N. J., now stationed at the Wiesbaden, Germany, Army Airforces station 36—40—76.

Ghezzi, Kansas City pro who arrived only Saturday, 39—40—79.

Well over 100 of the 252 contestants were ahead of Ghezzi and tomorrow he must face the same disadvantage that brought him grief today—playing over a strange course.

A score of 150 for the 36-hole qualifying round was generally regarded as the likely limit for qualifiers, although scores may go up as a result of a hard shower that soaked the course late today. That would require a 71 from Ghezzi.

The top 100 qualifiers will settle down to 18 holes each Wednesday and Thursday. On Friday the best 40 will go 36 holes for the crown.

Dai Rees, pint-sized Welsh professional, and Arthur Lees, 39-year-old Yorkshire, led the field over the championship Hoylake course with a pair of 71's.

Professional Henry Cotton, who stopped ten straight American victories in the open by winning in 1934, and shares with Rees the British public choice to do it again, came in over the Hoylake course with 74.

Ghezzi was unhappy and even considered replacing his caddy with one who knows the championship layout better. His caddy, Eddy Blackburn, is the same one Stranahan fired in the British Amateur championship a year ago and he carried Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias' clubs when she won the British Women's Amateur earlier this month.

Martin, the King Of Stealers, Beats Prison Team, 14-0

McAlester, Okla., June 30 (AP). The Oklahoma Penitentiary Outlaws lost their first baseball game in three years—but it took John Leonard "Pepper" Martin to turn the trick.

Martin, the Brooklyn Dodger scout and onetime "wild horse of the Osage" when he was burning up the majors as a base stealer turned pitcher to fool the Outlaws.

And not only did he pitch shutout ball, 14-0, but he also collected three hits in four trips to the plate, including a triple, a double and a single.

The trible almost cleared a 50-foot prison wall 400 feet away from home plate.

Martin, who has a ranch near Quinton, Okla., played with the Quinton Legionaires in the game against the Outlaws.

He plans to remain in this area until July 3 when he will go to Denver, Colo., for a Dodger baseball school for boys.

Babe Skips May's Tourney

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—First Ben Hogan and Jimmy Demaret, professional golf's one-two money winners, and now Babe Didrikson Zaharias, the unbeatable gal swinger, have elected to skip the $36,390 All-American championships at Tam O'Shanter course, Thursday through Sunday.

Mrs. Zaharias, landing in New York today after her British amateur women's conquest, announced she would not defend her women's title in the Tam O'Shanter spectacle, instead returning to Denver to "work in my rose garden."

This came as a surprise to Promotor George May as he directed some 138 amateurs through an All-American qualifying round.

"The last time I saw Babe, she promised to compete at Tam O'Shanter," said May. "I have a hunch I'll get a telephone call from her saying she is on her way here."

Hogan, who yesterday won the Chicago Victory open and $2,000 with a 14-under-par 270, and Demaret previously said they would forego a shot at the $7000 first prize in the All-American because of May's demand that all players wear identifying numbers or suffer a 50 per cent cut in winnings.

There is no money-lure for amateur Babe, who won last year's All-American women's crown with a 74-hole aggregate of 310, seven strokes ahead of Professional Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., who copped the Women's National Open at Greensboro, N. C., yesterday.

Early pace-setter among the amateurs who battled 18 holes today for 20 berths in the title round was Felice Torza of Wethersfield, Conn., with a 68, four under par. The simon-pure contingent included Boxing Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

Redskins Sign LSU's Gene Knight

Gene Knight, star football and baseball player at LSU, yesterday signed a two-year contract with the Washington Redskins.

The 23-year-old athlete was the Redskins second choice in the National League Draft of 330 college stars last December. He is six feet tall and weighs 190.

Worsham's 144 Is 2d in Penn Open

Pittsburgh, June 30 (AP).—Lew Worsham of Washington, newly crowned National Open golf champion, today participated in the Pennsylvania State Open championship and found that par wasn't good enough—he wound up in second place.

Husky Steve Kovach, a district steel worker, won the crown for the second consecutive year with a two-under par 142.

Meanwhile, Worsham found the going tough on the Fox Chapel Country Club course, and turned in a two-over par 74 in the morning round. With a large gallery at his heels in the afternoon, he clipped two strokes off regulation figures with a 70.

"We're interested in any ballplayer of any race, color or creed who can help the club." It had been reported that Phil scouts had contacted some Negro ballplayers in Indianapolis and Birmingham.

Ancient Frank Watts, who used to pitch for the Phillies, handed Heurich's Brewers their first league defeat of the season as his Naiman's Disc Shop teammates batted out a 5-2 victory over the Brewers in a Post-Industrial League game on the West Ellipse yesterday.

Big Favorites Pay Backers In 7 Races

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Charles Town, W. Va., June 30.—Favorite players had a field day here as seven straight public choices reached the winner's circle.

Four of the heavily played winners were odds-on and this group included G. Y. Booker's Lawless Miss, winner of the day's featured sixth race. The 4-year-old filly just toyed with the opposition, winning by 10 lengths while under the handling of Jockey Emilo Carrillo.

Lawless Miss went to the front at the first tingle of the starting bell and she gave her backers no anxious moments while being clocked in 1:23 4/5, only three fifths over the track record held by Soldierette. The filly paid $2.60, J. E. Crider's Comedy Player was second and Mrs. R. D. Boyd's Gallant was third in the field of six going about 7 furlongs.

The day's secondary feature, the fifth event, saw the defeat of Roman Boy, owned by the estate of P. H. Faulconer. However, the 11-year-old speedster wasn't the choice. Free Valley, owned by Wayne Kendrick of Washington and ridden by Jockey Woodrow Kirk of Silver Spring, was first home.

In second position and ahead of Roman Boy came J. M. Trapnell's Busy Moose. Free Valley paid $5.20 and was clocked in :50 3/5 for the about 4½ furlongs.

The daily double was the sweetest mutuel of the meeting, returning a mere $9. Mrs. M. H. Jenkins Val Victory was an easy winner in the first at a $3.60 mutuel and G. Y. Booker's Oyster K., with Carrillo up, also scored with ease at a $3.20 price.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo rode two winners, scoring with the Ripsaw Stable's Quality Jane at $3.60 in the third and C. Brookoroff's Valiant Dot at $5 in the fourth.

Matt Winn, 86

Louisville, Ky., June 30 (AP).—Col. Matt J. Winn, known to sportsmen over the Nation as "Mr. Kentucky Derby," observed his eighty-sixth birthday anniversary here today with relatives.

DEAR FOLKS:

Walter Haight, the horse, came up here for a rest. Word from Delaware Park says he threw the exercise boy and ran away for three miles. Why not make a jumper out of him? The refund on New Chum struck a popular chord. However, some of the big bettors had sold their tickets at half price. Harry, the Greek, bought up a fistful of tickets the night after the disqualification and later sold them at a discount. When the refund was made he felt like jumping off the Harpers Ferry cliff. One hundred and eight different horses have won races here so far. A check shows 72 winning favorites in 224 races. Moose Party is a big brother of Party Moose, the $66 winner of last Saturday. By the way, Bull Moose, owned by Dr. H. B. Langdon of Charles Town, is coming to the front as a sire. Apprentice Jimmy Baird has two more programs before he loses his five-pound apprentice allowance. However, he appears to be in no danger of losing the lead he holds over the riders. Baird goes from here to Bel Air. Art (WOL) Brown came up and gave his bankroll a shave and a haircut. See you on the rail.

Tigers Plan Night Games for 1948

Detroit, June 30 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers will join the 15 other major league baseball clubs in playing night games in 1948, President Walter O. Briggs of the Detroit Baseball Company announced today.

Briggs said in an announcement that night games will be inaugurated at Briggs Stadium "as early as possible" in 1948. The Tigers, he said, will schedule a total of 14 night games—two with each club in the American League. The Detroit club is the last of the major league teams to step into the nighttime field.

Cubs Hold Out Against Night Ball

Chicago, June 30 (AP).—P. K. Wrigley, owner of the Chicago Cubs, indicated today his National League club would continue as the only major league hold-out against home night baseball.

Informed that the Detroit Tigers planned to start arclight play at Briggs Stadium next year, leaving the Cubs as the only proponent of day-time competition at home, Wrigley asserted:

"Baseball to me is a day-time game and at Wrigley Field we have given customers a satisfactory sunshine outing and we'll continue to do so in the future, unless the patrons want it otherwise."

Asked how he would determine whether Cub fans wanted night baseball, Wrigley replied: "when attendance falls off."

Hollywood, June 30 (AP).—Actor Edward Arnold and his wife of 18 years have separated, his studio said today.

Arnold

The Arnolds could not be reached for comment.

Mrs. Arnold, the former Olive Emerson, concert singer, and her husband separated three weeks ago. Disclosure of the rift was delayed until after the marriage last Friday of Arnold's daughter, Jane, to Eugene Ebright 3d. Mrs. Arnold attended the wedding.

Arnold formerly was married to Harriet Marshall, by whom he has three children.

The studio said there were no immediate plans for divorce or property settlement.

Editors Land at N. Y. Field, Ending Epochal World Flight

New York, June 30 (U.P.).—The Constellation America landed at La Guardia Field late today, completing the first round-the-world passenger flight in commercial aviation history and inaugurating Pan-American World Airways' new twice-weekly global service.

Carrying a party of newspaper editors and publishers and airline officials, the four-engined transport glided down at 5:05 p. m. (EDT) onto the field from which it had taken off 14 days ago on a 21,426-mile flight over three oceans and three continents.

Actual flying time was about 95 hours.

The America flew to Gander, Newfoundland, and Shannon, Eire, with subsequent stops at London; Istanbul, Karachi and Calcutta, India; Bankok; Manila, Shanghai; Tokyo; Guam; Wake Island; Honolulu, San Francisco and Chicago.

[Erwin D. Canham, editor of the Christian Science Monitor, who made the world flight, told the Associated Press that, "The world is filled with unsolved problems and its nations and people gravely need American aid.

["But this help should not be limited to money, which in many ways is the most transient and valueless of aid. It should rather consist of technical know-how, of practical tutelage and example along the many lines in which we are proficient. We should make democracy-in-action as vigorous and revolutionary as Communism seems to be.

["These are my chief conclusions."]

Keep CUBA A Good Customer by Raising the SUGAR Quota

AN Appeal to the American People > > >

DISCUSSIONS NOW GOING ON in the United States Senate vitally concern Cuba's ability to buy American manufactured goods. They also have a direct bearing on the economic health of Cuba and the U. S.

These discussions in the Senate Banking Sub-Committee on Sugar aim at fixing Cuba's quota in the American sugar market.

Secretary of State George C. Marshall and Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson have expressed their support for a substantial quota for Cuba's basic export commodity. This support was acknowledged with thanks in a resolution recently passed unanimously by the Cuban House of Representatives.

These questions that are today under discussion affect us so deeply that their outcome may mean death or life to Cuba's people; crisis or stability for Cuba's economy. But the interests of the people of the United States are likewise at stake.

What the Sugar Quota Means

For Cuba, with her colonial economy which depends solely on her sugar and tobacco exports, a reduction of her quota of sugar for the American market will mean reducing her production, and, consequently, unemployment, poverty and hunger among the workers and farmers. It also means less money to buy the goods that are imported from the United States. Sixty percent of Cuba's working population are employed in the sugar industry.

For you, a reduction of the Cuban sugar quota will mean an equal reduction in a very important export market. In spite of standing restrictions imposed on Foreign Trade, Cuba imported from the United States last year $272,000,000.00 in automobiles, radio sets, electrical appliances, cooking utensils, machinery, cloth, construction materials, rice, lard, wheat, flour, canned goods, etc., thus providing remunerative work for thousands of miners, steel workers, seamen, longshoremen and warehousemen, automobile, radio and refrigeration workers, and the farmers who grow the rice, wheat and other vegetables and fruits that Cuba buys from your country.

Cuba Supplies Over 50% U. S. Sugar

That is why it also concerns you, the people of the United States, that Cuba be granted a sugar quota of at least fifty percent of the total United States consumption. Today Cuba is supplying more than half of the United States consumption of sugar. When Cuba's people are employed, they can buy the goods that you produce. Cuba today is third among Latin-American countries in imports from the U. S.

When Cuban sugar revenue from the American market was curtailed as a result of the Smoot-Hawley Tariff Law, Cuba was forced to reduce her purchases from the United States. They fell to as low as $27,000,000.00 in 1932. Wages dropped to 20c a day. Contrast this with last year's imports totaling $272,000,000.00. That reduction in trade during the depression years added to the total unemployment in the United States.

The preservation of a substantial sugar quota for Cuba to supply the American market does no harm to the sugar industry already established in the United States. Other products now being produced abundantly in the United States would largely reap the benefit if Cuba's buying possibilities are enhanced.

Good Neighbor in War and Peace

During the war years when Pacific sources were unable to send the United States a single grain of sugar, labor shortages made it impossible to increase production on the Continent and in Porto Rico. The requirements of war demanded more sugar, more molasses and more alcohol. Cuba quickly increased cane growing and offered the United States her entire production of five million tons of sugar at a controlled price—a trifle above two and a half cents per pound. During those war years, many Cuban seamen risked their lives to run the blockade set up by German submarines, carrying sugar to the United States on schooners and other small unarmed craft. Some died in the attempt.

This year, Cuban production is 6,400,000 tons. If Cuba's sugar quota is raised, it will soon be possible to export to the United States enough sugar to eliminate any restrictions on the consumption of so necessary a food.

For these reasons, we, the workers of Cuba, united under our national labor body—the Confederation of Cuban Workers (Confederacion de Trabajadores de Cuba) and particularly the sugar workers of Cuba, united under our National Federation of Sugar Workers, (Federacion Nacional de Trabajadores Azucareros), hereby appeal to the people of the United States to lend your authority and influence to support a larger sugar quota for Cuba in the American market. This will assure a large volume of exports of American goods to our country and help maintain employment and decent living standards for both Cuba and America.

The Washington Post
WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JULY 1, 1947

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

This is New Year's Day in Government—the first day of the 1948 fiscal year—and it's a day when there's lots of news for Federal workers. This is some of it:

COMMERCE: At the last minute yesterday, employes in its Export Control Division were told to report for work today as usual. The authority to carry on the controls were extended for only two weeks by Congress. Incidentally, John Borton, division director, has resigned.

FBI: The House yesterday uanimously approved and sent to the White House the bill which would allow G-men to retire at 50 after 20 years of service. This bill had been stymied as Treasury and other agents had sought to get in on the better retirement plan.

RETIREMENT: The Forand Act died last night. It guaranteed a discounted annuity to a laid-off employe who was at least 55 and who had had 25 or more years of service. A continuing bill has passed the House but it has been shelved temporarily in the Senate.

CEILINGS: Yesterday was the day that all Federal agencies were to come within a fixed personnel ceiling as set by Congress in the Federal Employe Pay Act of 1946. And the Byrd Economy Committee has launched an inquiry to see if the law has been met. Offhand, it's said the War Department is "well over" its 176,000 ceiling for graded employes. If a further probe proves this to be true—then War employes are in for more troubles. The law denies its benefits (a 14 per cent raise effective a year ago today) to employes in any agency that violates its ceiling provisions.

OGE: The 140 employes in the Office of Government Reports had voted overwhelmingly to stick to their jobs and gamble on action to continue the agency before Congress acted to extend it temporarily.

AGRICULTURE: Career employes who were fired out of the sugar rationing branch with no notice whatever were given another raw deal yesterday. They were told their furloughs would end on July 15 and that they'd be off the payroll on that date.

INFORMATION: Civil Service has sent a detailed questionnaire to each Federal agency requesting descriptions of all jobs in them. It will use the information to replace temporary and war service people with displaced career people.

CIVIL SERVICE soon will announce an exam for messenger, $1690 a year. Veterans will be given top priority for the jobs and nonveterans will be appointed only after the list of eligible veterans has been exhausted . . . Also coming up is an exam for photographer, $2168 to $3397 . . . The Naval Gun Factory here is accepting applications for all ungraded industrial jobs such as carpenter, boilermaker, radio mechanic, etc. . . . And Civil Service yesterday announced an exam for occupational therapists, $2644 to $4902, and for financial analysts jobs, $3397 to $5905, in Securities and Exchange.

REVENUE: The fuddy-duddy personnel office in the Bureau of Internal Revenue is trying to be as mysterious as possible about firings now in progress. Officials won't even admit that layoffs are being made, and they seem to think they're getting away with something—I don't know what.

Anyway, I've learned that an order went out yesterday to abolish about 4500 jobs, but at least 1000 or so of these jobs are believed to be vacant. However, the staff at headquarters here has escaped the economy ax. If any layoff here becomes necessary, it'll come later.

The office here has had a "freeze" on for several months and it's below both its personnel and dollar ceilings. The staff here had been upset by stories of layoffs up to 1200.

The abolition of 4500 jobs will cost the Treasury about half a million dollars annually in taxes.

PAY RAISES: Senators Flanders (R., Vt.) and Baldwin (R., Conn.) yesterday teamed up to sponsor that long-pending and worthy bill to raise the salaries of Cabinet members and other Federal officials. In a statement the Senators related how the Government was losing good and able people because of its unrealistic wage policy.

The bill would make these increases: Cabinet members to $20,000; Undersecretaries and the Solicitor General, $17,500; Assistant Secretaries, $15,000, and salaries of board and commission members to be from $12,500 to $17,500 as fixed by the President.

Giant Fish Ladders

Portland, Oreg. (U.P.).—Army engineers are building scale models of giant fish ladders to be installed on the new $180,000,000 McNary dam across the Columbia River. The ladders will consist of a series of raised pools to help salmon get over the dam so they can go upstream to spawn.

7 Sons Eagle Scouts

Helena, Mont., (U.P.).—The seven sons of Montana's attorney general, R. V. Bottomly, hold the national record — seven Eagle Scouts in one family. In a special ceremony, Gov. Sam C. Ford pinned Scouting's highest badge on Douglas Bottomly, 15, last of the sons to receive the award.

Red Cross Aids Vets

Washington (U.P.).—The American Red Cross during the last six months of 1946 helped 2,002,000 veterans and their families get loans or file for Government benefits. Red Cross headquarters reports.

Soldier Hurt When Auto Leaves Road In Virginia

"Buddy" Sought In Swamp Near Mt. Vernon; Track Victim Succumbs

D. C. traffic deaths to date 34
Deaths this date last year 28
Total deaths last year 72

One soldier was hurt critically and police sought his companion last night when a speeding automobile left Mount Vernon highway near Mount Vernon, Va. and plunged into a swamp.

At Fort Belvoir station hospital was Pvt. Robert B. Myers, 21, stationed there. Authorities said he suffered a fractured skull and broken legs in the accident at 6:30 p.m..

Police said they could find no trace at the scene of Myers' "buddy," who was "still back in there," according to almost incoherent mumblings of the injured man. Police said a second man could have been tossed clear from the careening automobile which tore down 75 feet of guard rail before rolling into the swamp.

Within the District yesterday, Mrs. Gloria North, 22, of 2325 N st. nw., mother of a month-old baby, died of injuries received Saturday when she was pinned to the railing of the M st. nw. bridge by a skidding truck.

The driver of the vehicle, a Ford pickup, was Otis Harper, 30, 1434 F st. ne., who had been released in $1500 bond on a reckless driving charge. He was held for the coroner yesterday and again released in the custody of his attorney, Charles E. Ford.

Police said Harper, who was released after treatment at Emergency Hospital, lost control of the truck and skidded into Mrs. North and the bridge railing. The victim died at 6 a. m. at Gallinger Hospital.

Two accidents reported by police yesterday injured three women, one a district resident and the others from Lanham, Md.

The two Maryland visitors, Mrs. Carrie Carlsson, 69, and Mrs. Ethel Meloy, 52, were both admitted to Emergency Hospital after being struck by the front corner of a streetcar. They were standing in a loading zone on the west side of 14th st at G nw. when hit shortly after noon, according to police.

Mrs. Carlsson was on her way to make final funeral arrangements at the Hines Funeral Home, 2901 14th st. nw., for her husband, Carl A. V. Carlsson, when the accident happened, police learned. Mr. Carlsson, a retired Navy Department consulting engineer, died Saturday.

The streetcar operator, William Brunner, 58, of Chillum, Md., told police he was coming to a halt when the car swayed and struck the women.

Mrs. Carlsson sustained a fractured right arm, while Mrs. Meloy received scalp and head injuries.

Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, 29, 4351 Shaw dr. ne., was admitted to Casualty Hospital for a broken leg and possible broken spine. She was hurt in a collision between the car in which she was riding, driven by her husband, Arnold Williams, 30, and a Capital Transit bus driven by Elijah E. Gordy, 25, 3524 Clay pl. ne.

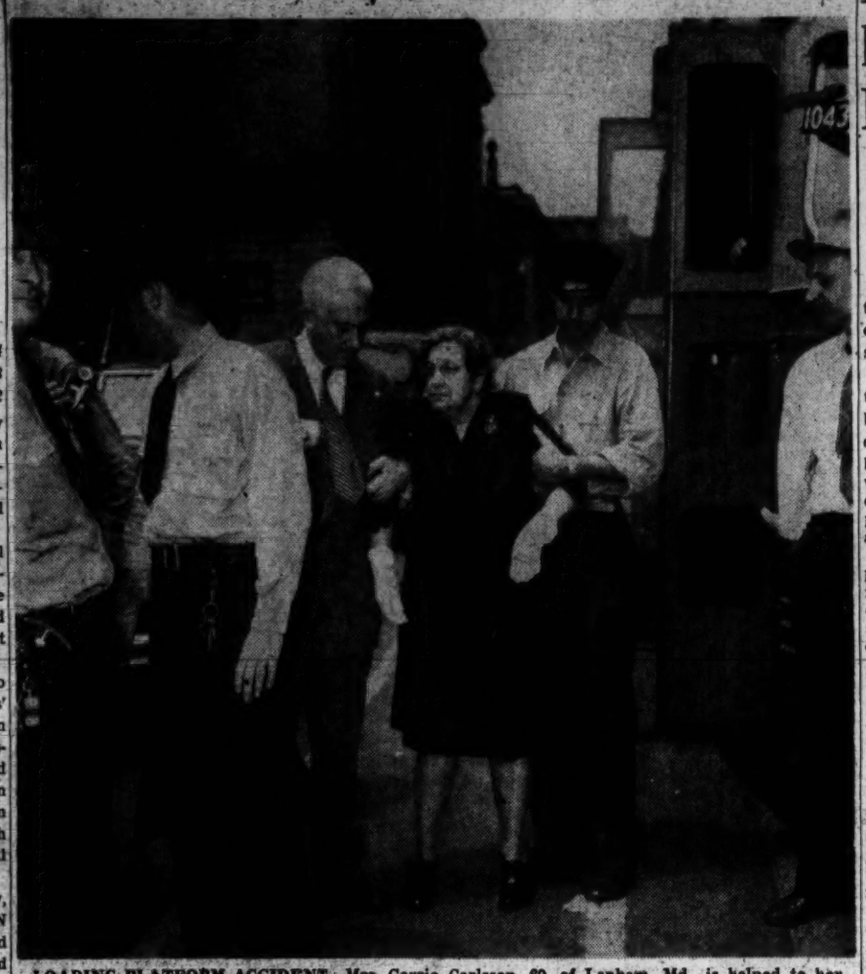
The accident was at Minnesota ave. and Clay pl. ne. at about midnight.

[Paul Bellamy, editor of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, said at Chicago, where he left the plane, that he believes America must distribute both her charity and her ideas "selectively" in strategically important countries, the Associated Press said.

["We must choose spots that are capable of regeneration and which are strategically important in the great contest between communism and democracy." Bellamy said he did not think America "can do any good in India," but named the Philippines, China and Japan as nations "where I think we can do some good."

[He termed China "the most dangerous spot in the Far East."]

Streetcar's Sway Injures Woman



LOADING PLATFORM ACCIDENT—Mrs. Carrie Carlsson, 69, of Lanham, Md., is helped to her feet after she was struck by the front end of a streetcar at 14th and G sts. nw., yesterday. She received a fractured right arm. Mrs. Ethel Meloy, 52, another Maryland visitor, was also injured as the car swayed in coming to a halt

Dishwasher Gets 10-30 Years In Rape Case Near Library

Harry R. Bowen, 29-year-old dishwasher, was sentenced yesterday to serve 10 to 30 years in prison for raping a 37-year-old waitress on the Library of Congress grounds January 10.

Justice Richmond B. Keech of the District Court called Bowen's deed an "atrocious" one. He pointed out that the victim was beaten brutally during the two hours she was kept a prisoner behind bushes.

"I can truthfully say that, except for your attorney's skill in handling the case and except for the generosity of the jury, you might well be facing the electric chair at this moment," Justice Keech said. Bowen's attorney is Charles E. Ford.

Earlier this month, a District Court jury convicted Bowen for the rape but declined to impose the death penalty as they were empowered. Under those circumstances, Justice Keech imposed the maximum lesser penalty.

Ford contended Bowen was drunk at the time of the assault.

Tails Are Give-Away

Muncie, Ind., (U.P.).—Police had no trouble capturing two youths who escaped from the Indiana State Reformatory. One wore a full-dress evening suit taken from a car near the place where they walked off their jobs.

Thief Saw Better

Indianapolis (U.P.).—Robert Mills told police that a pair of binoculars were stolen from his automobile when he left it parked in front of a burlesque theater.

Correction

Nathan Cosman, 7312 Bradley blvd., Bethesda, was referred to incorrectly in yesterday's Post as being associated with the Kenyon Motor Co., 320 Florida ave. ne. The story told of the theft of $4000 by two holdup men of Mr. and Mrs. Cosman in their home. Cosman is not connected with that company. The Post regrets the error.

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered two persons held for action of the grand jury in two weekend deaths.

Those held are Margaret Lewis, 31, of 1010 First st. se. and Ernest N. Jones, 21, of 516 Park rd. nw.

Margaret Lewis was held in the fatal shooting of John Henry Easton, 51, of 622 K st. se. Easton was found unconscious in a first floor room of the First st. address early Sunday morning.

He was pronounced dead upon arrival at Gallinger Hospital at 2:55 a. m. by Dr. William Hurley, staff prysician. Easton's brother, Cliff M. Easton, 225 F st. sw., was present at the time of the shooting. He testified that Miss Lewis and Easton had been arguing about money.

Jones was held in the death of George Thomas, 62, who lived in the panitor's quarters at 523 11th st. nw. Thomas struck his head on the pavement when knocked down during a fist fight with Jones at 14th and V sts. nw. early yesterday, it was reported.

Fire Rules Postponed Nine Months

Buildings Going Up Now or Changed In Use Must Come Under Code at Once

The District Commissioners yesterday postponed the effective date of Washington's tough new fire safety rules for nine months.

The suspension affects regulations applicable only to existing buildings whose use remains unchanged during the period. New buildings, or existing buildings whose use is changed, will have to comply with the fire safety rules promulgated in the Egress Act adopted March 8, 1946.

Enforcement of the regulations previously had been postponed for a six-months' period ending today, while a citizens' committee studied effect of the rules, and drafted proposed amendments.

Study Time Wanted

Late last month, the Commissioners held a public hearing at which postponement of the effective date of the new code was advocated by all but one testifying witness.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, explained that the Commissioners' action yesterday was taken to give them time to weigh recommendations for changes in the rules made by the citizens committee, and to seek advice on such recommendations from two national organizations, the National Underwriters Association and the Buildings Officials Foundation.

General Young said that final recommendations for changes in regulations affecting new buildings probably can be presented to the District Commissioners "within two weeks more or less."

Changes to Take Month

Changes proposed by the citizens' committee for portions affecting existing buildings probably will take a month before final recommendations can be made to the Commissioners.

Revising regulations to comply with these changes will take about two months in the case of new buildings, and "at least four months and probably more" in the case of existing buildings, General Young estimated.

"In view of these uncertain time elements," he said, "it seems best to the Commissioners to give a nine months' further suspension in the case of existing buildings. The continuing limitation on certain available key materials was another factor in the decision."

A recent survey conducted by a 14-man District inspection team showed that 97 per cent of 2089 local buildings would need changes in order to comply with the new code had it gone into effect as scheduled, today. Many buildings, the survey showed, would need costly major structural changes like new fireproof stairways and relocation of heating plants.

100 Million Cost Estimated

Earlier this year, Rufus Lusk, secretary of the Building Owners and Managers Association, estimated that enforcement of the Egress Act would cost District building owners up to 100 million dollars.

General Young said yesterday that once the proposed fire regulations have been changed to comply with approved recommendations, public hearings will be held before they are adopted by the District government.

Jap Whaling Stirs Protest From British

London, June 30 (AP).—Maj. Christopher Mayhew, Undersecretary for Foreign Affairs, told Commons today the British Ambassador to Washington had been instructed to seek explanation of the United States' action in authorizing a second Japanese Antarctic whaling expedition without consulting with her wartime allies.

Britain reluctantly assented to the first whaling expedition last year with the understanding that London and the dominions would be consulted if another was contemplated. Australia and New Zealand have voiced their disapproval of the enterprise, but have made no formal protest.

Britain considers Japanese whaling methods wasteful and fears the whaling fleet might prove the nucleus for a future Japanese navy.

Aussie Is Critical

Canberra, Australia, June 30 (AP).—Federal opposition leader R. G. Menzies criticized in a statement tonight Gen. Douglas MacArthur's decisions to permit a second Japanese whaling expedition to the Antarctic and to allow the Japanese to work phosphate deposits on Anguar Island.

Menzies said there was too much dispostion to treat matters of this kind as a prerogative of one man or a small group of men.

He said that MacArthur had every right to confidence and respect on military matters but that these concerned the economic future of Japan and also the economic and military future of other countries, notably Australia. He contended that in these circumstances, Australia should have a right to a voice in the settlement of policies.

57 Rails Buy Ownership of Sleeping Cars

Wilmington, Del., June 30 (AP).—The Nation's sleeping car facilities today passed into the hands of 57 railroads.

In a brief ceremony, three railroad officials turned over checks totaling $40,202,482 to J. S. Taylor, vice president of Pullman, Inc., which thus divested itself of the Pullman Co., its sleeping car subsidiary.

The action ended seven years of litigation in the Government's anti-trust action against Pullman Inc. Under a court order, Pullman was required to sell either the Pullman Co. or its car-making subsidiary, Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co.

The 80-year-old sleeping car empire founded by George M. Pullman elected to sell the sleeping car service and after another court battle, the buying group of railroads was accepted as the purchaser.

Before today, the railroads had bought Pullman's entire fleet of parlor cars and some 600 lightweight sleepers for about $35,995,000. The purchase of the company's capital stock of 731,350 shares completed the transaction for a figure in the neighborhood of $75,000,000.

The railroads have not disclosed whether or not the sleeping cars will continue to be operated under the name "Pullman" nor have they stated whether they intend to operate the cars through a new company or individually.

Senate Acts To Untangle Gun Toting Bill Mix-Up

The Senate acted yesterday to take back from the White House a District bill to curb gun-toting that had landed there by mistake.

The wrong bill went to the White House, Capitol aides said. Senate District Chairman C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) won clearance for a special resolution to call the bill back to the House. The House is slated to act today.

The gun bill must go back to the House, then to the Senate. There an amendment which passed the Senate will be attached, and the whole business returned to the House.

What went to the White House last week with the antigun toting bill that had passed the House. It would leave the offense of carrying concealed weapons without a permit a misdemeanor, as in present law, but give police special authority to search for weapons on probable cause and without the warrant now required.

This version was entirely changed by the Senate. It voted for the plan of Senator John S. Cooper (R., Ky.) to make the offense a felony with stiffly increased penalties. Police would get the same authority to search for weapons without a warrant that they have in any other felony.

Instead of returning the bill to the House with Cooper's amendment for action, Senate aides said the bill went to the House without the amendment. It was then signed and delivered to the White House. However, the White House was notified so the President would not sign the wrong bill.

Unpassed Bills Parley Set by GOP Leaders

House and Senate Republican leaders may decide what to do about universal training, tax reduction, housing and other unenacted major bills at a program conference tentatively slated for tomorrow.

House leaders, led by Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., and Senate leaders captained by Senator Robert A. Taft, called the conference to budget the program through July 26, the scheduled adjournment day.

Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) meanwhile was polling Republican Senators on whether to make another try at tax reduction, and how they would vote.

A companion survey was being made by Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) and others on the Democratic side of the aisle.

Republican leaders have indicated they will not call up the new Knutson bill, making tax cuts effective January 1, unless assured of a veto-proof Senate majority of 63.

To date, GOP leaders have held out no hope for action by either House this session on universal training.

Senate leaders have tentatively booked Senate action on the Wagner-Taft-Ellender housing bill, but the House Banking Committee hasn't touched it.

Federal aid to education legislation meanwhile has cleared both House and Senate subcommittees.

What to do about these, as well as minimum wage, anti-poll-tax and other unpassed legislation may be determined for the first time on the leadership level tomorrow.

At D. C. Home Rule Hearing, the Citizens Stayed Away in Droves

House leaders yesterday threw sharp criticism at the District's "patchwork" government as they launched a drive to improve it.

Their criticism opened a month-long program of public hearings before the House Subcommittee on District Reorganization and Home Rule.

Commissioner John Russell Young told the subcommittee the citys' three Commissioners agree the local government would be improved if Congress gave it the same powers States give to their cities.

Attendance Scant

Young said such a move would greatly increase "the efficiency, flexibility and service of the District government."

Citizen attendance at the hearing was slight. Fewer than a dozen persons, other than officials and reporters, were in the House District Committee room as the hearing started.

Two major purposes of the hearing are to modernize the present government setup, and possibly to start the District into self-government.

District Committee Chairman Everett M. Dirksen (R., Ill.) appearing as first witness, said the subcommittee's future recommendations "should give us the basis for developing one of the most efficient instrumentalities of local government anywhere in the country.

"I'm certain a good, efficient instrumentality of government can be developed, at the same time preserving constitutional interest Congress has in the seat of government," Dirksen said.

Dirksen read a statement from House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr. (R., Mass.) saying "we cannot continue a city government for a million people on a hit-or-miss policy, particularly as it is the Nation's Capital."

"I wish you every success in your undertaking because I am very much interested in seeing that our Nation's Capital is equipped with the best Administrative machinery in the world," Martin said.

House Majority Whip John W. McCormack (D., Mass.) testified that District reorganization and self-rule are problems of "national importance."

McCormack said present city staffs are generally competen and efficient, but "they are seriously handicapped in their work by the overlapping and uncoordinated character of the administrative machinery."

He said 70 years of haphazard growth had left the District government "cumbersome and unintegrated."

McCormack said if the people of Washington wanted something done about home rule and possible representation in Congress they should cooperate with the subcommittee in its study.

He said his experience had been that District citizens would talk, but when the time came for action there were always some objections.

He said he was giving "no criticism, just a friendly challenge."

Subcommittee Chairman James O. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) declared the Nation's founders had never intended that Congress should whandle "the petty chicken feed of District ordinance passing.

Newsmen to Testify

When the founders gave Congress exclusive jurisdiction over the seat of government, said Auchincloss, "They did not intend it to sit as a muncipal council for the District or to deprive the Capital City of home rule."

He said a process of "drift and neglect," not deliberate policy, had deprived Washington of home rule.

He said the present District government, growing without plan or pattern, had increased from 10 major units in 1874 to a present total of more than 125.

"Modernization of this patchwork structure is long overdue," he said.

The hearing will continue at 10 a. m. tomorrow, in room 445 Old House Office Building. Witnesses include: Merlo J. Pusey, associate editor of The Washington Post; B. M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Star; Robert M. Buck, District Building reporter for the Washington Daily News, and Frank M. Smith, Capitol District news reporter for the Washington Times Herald.

'Boys' State' Divides On Labor Law Subject

Fort George G. Meade, Md., June 30 (AP).—Two political factions constituting an American Legion-sponsored "Boys' State" were divided here today on the subject of the Taft-Hartley Labor Bill, as the forty-odd youths from throughout Maryland laid plans for a model gubernatorial election.

Climaxing the third day of the model Commonwealth, 15-year-old Raymond Bellamy, 2819 Cheverly Ave., Cheverly, Md., spokesman of the "Federalist Party," placed his group on record as favoring the newly passed labor law, but added that it is "not strong enough. Expanding further, Bellamy called the bill "somewhat unfair," and said labor and management should be "on an equal plane."

John Malcolm Ashley, 18, Centerville, simply stated that his party, the Constitutionalists, was opposed to the law.

Both "parties" agreed in favoring universal, but not "compulsory," military training; abolition of the veto power in the United Nations Security Council; and "selective" imigration in "small doses on prewar levels."

On the subject of Jim Crow, the two groups said they favored the "present racial system." Bellamy stated his party sees "no solution at present other than bilateral systems of education," but would like to see "better economic opportunities for all Negroes."

Touching on the question of aid to foreign countries, Bellamy asserted that "feeding these people democracy with a spoon will prove much easier than trying to shove it down their throats with a bayonet."

Schools Criticized

Harrisonburg, Va., June 30 (AP). Despite substantial increases made recently in State support of schools, Virginia's position in the national picture is not greatly improved, G. Tyler Miller, State superintendent of Public Instruction, told the Fourth Institute on Public Education here.

The superintendent explained that other States have made equal strides in support of education and thus have kept the national figures much as they were.

Miller was one of a number of persons speaking at the final session of the institute. Also appearing were Robert F. Williams, executive secretary of the Virginia Education Association; Randolph W. Church, State librarian, and Miss Elizabeth Ellmore, Dinwiddie County Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Baltimore, June 30 (AP).—Chairman Robert M. Reindollar of the State roads commission said today that the new 22-mile highway between Frederick and Hagerstown would not be open to the general public until the end of July, although some automobiles already were using the road.

Paving is completed over the entire length, Reindollar said, but one contractor is behind in gutter and shoulder work on an eight-mile section.

Many cars, however, are passing the "road closed" signs and using the highway. The barriers are removed at night when traffic does not interfere with construction workers.

College Gets Rare Book

By The Associated Press

Dr. Edwin E. Willoughby, chief bibliographer of the Folger Shakespeare Library here, has presented to the library of the College of William and Mary a rare volume printed in Paris in 1499.

Dr. Willoughby, one-time professor and acting head of the department of library science, made the gift on the fifteenth anniversary of his appointment to the college faculty. He has been associated with the Folger Shakespeare Library since 1935.

John Jennings, who is in charge of rare volumes at the college, said the gift was one that might well have formed part of the first library of the College of William and Mary, located in Williamsburg, Va. "It is a compilation of all the writings of St. Augustine which bear upon the epistles of St. Paul," Jennings explained.

Torrential rains accompanied the winds, said by some to have reached 75 to 100 miles an hour. The blow unroofed or otherwise damaged about 100 buildings, cut off telephone and electric service and isolated residents for nearly nine hours Saturday.

An emergency crew from nearby Petersburg supplied John Randolph Hospital with emergency power while the injured were treated for minor cuts and bruises. Mayor Norwood Wilson and Chief of Police Carlisle Johnstone placed the damage at approximately $200,000.

The soil here is particularly adapted to tobacco and I believe Calvert County ranks number one in quality and number two in production."

The new agent was educated at Charlotte Hall Military Academy in St. Marys County, William and Mary College in Williamsburg, Va., and Western Maryland College. After raising tobacco for a few years, he became a chemistry teacher at the Calvert County High School between tobacco seasons.

Md. Milk Pact Seen Causing Retail Rise

A new agreement between Maryland milk producers and dairy concerns is expected to raise the price of milk one cent a quart in Baltimore next week, but will not have any effect on the price of milk here.

Dr. R. W. Shermantine, manager of the Maryland Milk Producers Cooperative, announced yesterday that Maryland farmers will receive a wholesale price increase of 40 cents per hundred pounds beginning July 7.

As a result, Baltimore milk officials anticipate an increase in the retail price of milk from 18 to 19 cents a quart. Philadelphia raised its price by one cent recently.

The price of milk in the Washington area, however, will remain unchanged, according to Bruce D. Derrick, executive director of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association. Milk here is selling for 17 cents a quart in the stores, 19½ cents a quart on home delivery.

Maryland and Virginia Roundup

RICHMOND, VA., June 30 (AP).

Directors of the Dixie Professional Football League, who met in Richmond over the weekend, adopted a four-team league schedule, but will not release the playing dates until it is certain whether two more teams will come into the loop.

The tentative schedule was drawn up on the basis of competition between Richmond, Portsmouth and Norfolk in Virginia and Charlotte, N. C.

The directors would make no comment on possible other entries, but Charlottesville, represented by Carl Deane, former Duke star, sought admission, and Newport News also was represented.

Although no particulars were given out on the schedule, the four-team slate probably will call for each team to meet the others twice, providing six home games for each club. A Shaughnessy playoff series may be used to decide the league championship.

Mrs. Ellis, President Tyler's Last Surviving Child, Is Dead

Mrs. Pearl Tyler Ellis, 87, last surviving child of President John Tyler, died yesterday at Madison, her home in Montgomery County, Va.

Mrs. Ellis was the 14th child of President Tyler. A bridal portrait of her mother, Mrs. Julia Gardiner of Gardiners Island, N. Y., hangs in the White House.

Her father had been elected vice president under President William Henry Harrison in the "Tippecanoe and Tyler too" campaign of 1840.

Born at Sherwood Forrest, a family estate on the James River in Charles City County, Va., she spent her early years in typical ante bellum Virginia plantation life.

Mrs. Ellis was fond of reminding listeners that her father had the largest family of any President. A brother, Dr. Lion Tyler, served for many years as president of William and Mary College.

Between her sixth and seventh year she and her mother ran the blockade in the midst of the Civil War in order to reach relatives in Long Island.

Among her childhood playmates was Stonewall Jackson's daughter, Julia.

Schooled in Georgetown

Mrs. Ellis was schooled at the Convent of the Visitation in old Georgetown.

On a visit to Richmond, she met her husband-to-be, William Munford Ellis, a Confederate army officer, then a member of the Virginia Legislature. Mr. Ellis died about 15 years ago.

Summer Slimming Schedule

Roll, Roll, Roll Those Pounds Away

By Ida Jean Kain

This is the ninth in a series of articles on summer slimming.

LET a gal gain 10 pounds and 20 of them pad the hips, or so it seems in summer. No series could be slimming without a set of exercises to roll off the bulges.

Happily, hips are not the immovable mass they are imagined to be . . . not when irresistible force is used on them anyway. In hot weather, next to swimming, rolling is the easiest form of exercise. The floor is the force that makes the hips give.

To deal with an all-around hip problem, the technique is to roll plump across the hip spread. . . .

Position: Lie on back on floor, legs straight down. Just relax. To make it easier, keep the feet on floor as you roll.

Movement: Take it slow and easy, roll across the hip span and on over to one thighline, then slowly roll back across the hips and on over to the other side. Figure it out and you can see that slow rolling is far more smoothing. It's hit, not miss.

To smooth away a shelf, or "back-porch" effect as one girl termed it, bring the weight to bear on that spot. Try an up-and-over roll.

Position: Lie on back on floor, arms out at sides, legs together and held straight up in air from the hips, almost at right angles to the trunk.

Action: Roll over to one side until the weight is resting on one elbow and all along one thighline. Now, up again and over, so as to hit the fat padding the other thighline and the back of the hips. Start with six or eight counts, rolling up the count later. If you'll keep the lower abdominal muscles pulled up snugly, this helps to tone the muscular girdle.

Easier Way

IF THE above exercise was too tough to take . . . try an easier version:

Position: Lie on back, knees flexted and pulled up over chest, hands clasped around knees. Roll. . . .

Make Junior Like It

If the youngster does not like bread, try some other bread than the usual wheat bread. Frequently raisins, and whole wheat and graham bread attract where plain wheat will fail. All of these are just as nutritious, some of them even more so.

Care of Glass Utensils

Glass cooking utensils should be thoroughly dry on the outside before they are placed on the stove. Even a few drops of water on the outside of a glass coffeemaker, for instance, may cause uneven heating and result in cracking or breaking.

7-Year-Old Tolise Gathings Is Enthusiastic Music Fan

TOLISE GATHINGS
... She Shall Have Music

MUSIC is the spice of life to 7-year-old Tolise Gathings, daughter of Representative and Mrs. E. Candler Gathings of Arkansas.

But her tastes are not for any routine nursery rhyme tunes, thank you. It's "long-haired" stuff that is this young lassie's dish—symphony, concerts and light opera.

Ever since she was five, Tolise has been an habituee of theaters and concert halls (during matinee hours, of course). She already has witnessed more musical events than the average adult can boast of having attended in a lifetime. And tonight she graduates into the big time. For when the National Symphony salutes the State of Arkansas with a symphonic composition at the Watergate, Tolise will be occupying a ringside seat. Alongside will be her mother and dad who share their youngster's enthusiasm for good music.

Music Comes First

Tolise, who has red hair and merry blue eyes, likes to play with dolls and ride ponies as well as the next little girl. But she will drop anything she is doing to attend a musical show.

Her parents, believing that children should be introduced to good music at an early age, have tried to develop her tastes gradually. First came the light, gay, musical comedies. At the National Theater she has seen the "Student Prince," "Up in Central Park," "Blossom Time," "Sing Out, Sweet Land," and many others. She is fond of them all and always maintains that her favorite is the very last one she saw.

Concerts came next and tonight she will hear her first symphony. Next to come are the Don Cossack military dacers and singers and Prokofieff's ballet about animals, "Peter and the Wolf."

This summer Tolise is taking her first fling at a formal musical education. A student at the Barrie Summer School, she takes her singing lessons each afternoon. In a year or two she will begin studying piano.

Secret hope of the Gathings family is that Tolise will become interested in the violin. Some time ago her grandmother presented her wth a family heirloom, a 200-year-old violin. That is one of the reasons why Representative and Mrs. Gathings are interested in watching little Tolise's reactions to tonight's presentation at the Watergate. For the program wil be built around McDowell's lilting music based on the early Arkansas fiddle tunes.

What better medium for an Arkansas daughter?

Ask Anne . . . Your Questions on Homemaking

I have a new green chambray dress on which I spilled cherry pie. Will you please tell me how to remove the stain? The dress has not been washed and I have not tried to remove the stain in any way except to sponge off the syrup with water. R. S.

Soak the cherry stain in cool water. Then wash in warm suds and rinse. If the stain remains, make a solution of two tablespoons of hydrogen peroxide to a gallon of water. Test the solution on a hidden part of the garment to be sure it will not affect the color. Then soak the stains for a half hour or longer if necessary. Rinse twice.

I am planning a cross-country auto trip this summer. I would appreciate it if you would give me some suggestions for keeping a 3-year-old girl entertained during the trip. We will be driving a long while each day for more than a week. Could you refer me to articles containing helpful advice on traveling with children? W. E. S.

A number of good suggestions on entertaining children on long trips were included in the booklet, "If Your Baby Must Travel in Wartime," which was issued by the United States Children's Bureau during the war. Here are some of them:

Gather together a number of small toys and place them in a box of their own. You might also include crayons and coloring books or tablets and a few picture books. A familiar toy should be included, as new ones are not so comforting.

If space is available, allow the youngster to change her seat often. Sometimes she will enjoy riding in the front seat. At other times, she will want to play with her toys or take a nap in the back.

It will help to keep her amused if you can think up stories to tell her about the things she sees along the way—the children, the cattle, the trains, and the factories. Songs you know by heart may be used many times over, too.

Since yours is to be a long journey, you might pick up a new toy for her occasionally in the towns you pass through. There will probably be some toys typical of the locality which will be particularly interesting to her.

Please suggest a home method I could use on a white sweater that has become yellow. The last time I washed it, it was very slow drying and since then has been packed away. It is a very heavy white wool slip-over man's sweater. A. F. V.

I'm afraid there isn't much you can do to restore the sweater's original whiteness. You might try soaking it for 15 minutes in a solution of one tablespoon of hydrogen peroxide to a quart of cool water. If this lightens the color, repeat. Rinse three times.

My bedspring squeaks noisily, although it is not rusty. It is of the flat steel type, not a coiled box spring. Is there anything I can do to the spring to eliminate this creaking? J. E.

Wipe the spring with a cloth and a few drops of lemon oil. This will clean the spring and oil it slightly, and should help to eliminate the squeaks.

Could you please tell me how to remove ink from softwood floors? The ink was spilled about six months ago. Also, is there a way to remove cooking grease from wallpaper? R. C.

If the ink has penetrated the wood, it will probably be difficult to remove the stains from your floor. Try scrubbing with a brush and scouring powder. If that isn't effective, use pumice, sand or steel wool. To help avoid similar problems in the future, it would be a good idea to cover your floor with a penetrating finish, waxing over it.

If the grease spots on your wallpaper are fresh, hold a clean white blotter over the stains and apply a warm (not hot) iron. Move the blotter as it takes up the grease. Stubborn grease spots often respond to a poultice treatment. Mix fuller's earth into a paste with carbon tetrachloride. Apply thickly to the spot, thinning out at the edges beyond the soiled area. Let the poultice remain until it's thoroughly dry, then wipe off carefully with a cloth dampened with carbon tetrachloride. It's wise to test this treatment first on an inconspicuous area, as some wallpaper pigment "runs" when carbon tetrachloride is applied.

Will you please tell me how to remove rust stains from white linen and pink and blue knitted woolens? Also, how can I scrub my zinc wash tubs that have old soap stuck to the walls and bottom? How would you advise me to clean the whitewash stains off my cement basement floor? M. H. S.

Rust can often be removed from washable material by sprinkling the stain with salt, moistening with lemon juice, and exposing to direct sunlight. Iron rust soaps, for sale at drug stores, also are effective in taking rust stains out of washable fabrics. If the material is non-washable, take the garment to an expert dry cleaner promptly. Be sure to point out the rust stains to the cleaner.

To clean your zinc wash tubs, scour them with a brush and hot soapsuds, using a mild scouring powder if necessary. Rinse and dry the tubs thoroughly. If they appear tarnished, sponge the surface with a solution of one part vinegar to 12 parts water. Let the solution stand on the zinc for a few minutes, then rinse and wipe dry.

A thorough scrubbing with hot water and scouring powder should remove the whitewash stains from the cement floor in your basement.

My husband has a yellow rayon washable sports shirt. After one wearing, I found a brown ring under the arm and a brown stripe across the collar. Washing did not remove the stains. What would you suggest? Also, what is the best way of removing ink stains from a white tablecloth? M. H. C.

Since the stains on the shirt are apparently from perspiration, you may be able to remove them with ammonia fumes. Dampen the stains with water, then hold them over an open ammonia bottle. If this isn't effective, try sponging with vinegar.

Inks vary greatly in composition, so it's hard to name the one best method for removing ink stains. What's effective for one type of ink may not be for another. In removing fresh stains made by writing ink, glycerin is often helpful. Pour either plain glycerin or one of the soapless shampoos on the stain. Rub lightly between the hands, then rinse with clear water. Apply glycerin as long as any ink comes from the stain. If this method isn't entirely effective, use one of the commercial bleaches recommended for removing ink stains.

Can you suggest a way to keep dish and wash cloths fresh during the summer months? Mine acquire a sour smell no matter how often I wash them.

I would like to know how to remove a spot from the upholstery of my divan. It was made by spilling olive oil, then sponging with a cleaner which left a stain. J. A. J.

Sun dish and wash cloths frequently in a window or out-of-doors to keep them from souring. Or soak them every now and then in a solution of half water and half laundry bleach. Keep a wide-mouthed jar of this mixture handy and drop the cloths in occasionally when they're not in use. This will help to keep cloths white, as well as sweet-smelling. Frequent washing in clean, hot water and soapsuds is of course also necessary.

As you have found, removing spots from upholstery is difficult, chiefly because it is impossible to get a pad under the spot to absorb the stain as it is sponged. Then too, the stain removal agents may affect the color or texture of the upholstery. If the upholstery on your divan is washable, shampooing with a commercial upholstery cleanser may be helpful. However, the wisest course would probably be to call in an expert from a company that specializes in furniture cleaning.

Please tell me how to remove perspiration stains from a rose-colored balloon cloth dress. I tried mild soap and water without results. The dress, though washable, has been dry cleaned to date. It hasn't been cleaned since becoming stained, however. E. R. E.

Since body perspiration is usually acid, an alkali will sometimes restore colors recently changed by perspiration. Dampen the stain with water and hold it over the fumes from an ammonia bottle. Another method—sometimes effective on older stains that have become alkaline—is to sponge with vinegar, then rinse with cold water. If the first suggestion doesn't work, you might try the second. It's not always possible to restore colors changed by perspiration, however.

MARKET MEMO

There are plenty of frying chickens and smoked hams on the market this week for Fourth of July picnics. Fresh beef, lamb, pork, and veal, however, are still in short supply. Frying chickens are a particularly good buy—one of the few food items selling below the old OPA ceiling. The price runs around 41 cents a pound at retail.

As for seafood, quantities of hard-shelled crabs are being brought in at the Washington wharves now, but there are few soft-shelled ones. Rockfish have been scarce, but over the week-end, one fishing boat arrived here with about 6000 pounds caught in the lower Potomac. Clams are plentiful. Scallops, scarce until recently, are also arriving in good quantity.

Vegetable plentifuls on the market include lima and snap-beans, beets, cabbage, cucumbers, lettuce, and green peppers. Lots of South Carolina and Georgia peaches coming in, and plums and canteloupes are abundant. The first "watermelon boat" of the season is tied up at the wharves with a load of plump Florida melons.

HARSH, burning summer sun can turn silky locks into dry, brittle strands. The fastidious woman remembers this when she goes sun-bathing and takes along a special lotion to protect the hair and scalp from dying

Girls Can't Stay Beautiful And Be Dumb Under the Sun

By Peggy Preston

Ole King Sol is in season again and licking his chops over the prospect of how much damage he can inflict on the human race with his super atom burning ultra violet machine.

Beaches and rooftops are already sizzling under his glaring, burning rays. Those eager sun bathers, so carefree (for a day) and so careless, are fair and easy game to his blistering old eyes. They present so much exposed winter-whitened skin for the subtle touch of his torrid brush.

Of course, he'll have his frustrations, maybe in 75 per cent of his cases. The cosmetic industry has seen to that. Everyone who reads should know that a sunburn is old fashioned, not to mention dangerous and quite often unbecoming.

All should observe two simple rules—limit the time spent in the sun and use protective oil.

Plenty of Protection

The supply and variety of suntan oils appears to be limitless. They're available in prices ranging from 50c to $1.50 and each claim special properties for protecting the skin. One and all, however, share the same general merits; they contain the oil that lightens the damage from fierce summer sun and they help to keep you from resembling a withered prune in September.

Many sun worshipers swear by such time-honored favorites as pure cocoa butter, olive oil or baby oil. These do the trick without benefit of perfume or ballyhoo.

However, women, generally speaking, prefer the special suntan lotions that are not sticky or greasy and less apt to smear pretty bathing costumes. All the well known cosmetic firms produce excellent lotions of this type and you can have your choice at your favorite drug or department store.

Repels Sun and Mosquitoes

New this season is a rich, lubricating suntan oil that does the usual job of screening off the harmful, burning rays of the sun and, in addition, contains a special insect-repelling ingredient. Mosquitoes will now keep their proper distance. And you can be a comfortable sunbather for a change.

The same firm offers a suntan cream for women who prefer to keep their skins fair and at the same time lap up a healthful portion of sunshine. A suntan is not becoming to every type of skin but it is foolish to stay in the shade just in order to avoid turning a new color. A heavy cream, such as this, is the ideal answer.

Highly fastidious women will worry about tiny sun wrinkles around their eyes and dry, brittle hair. These are the inevitable results of flirting with King Sol, but here again, modern aides are on the market to lend a helping hand.

A new hair lotion helps protect the hair and scalp from drying. Applied in a thin film before and after exposure to the sun, it will keep the hair looking soft and silky until shampoo time rolls around.

To combat "sun-squint" wrinkles which appear around the eyes there is a cream that is applied to the lids during the day. This same cream can be used nightly to help erase these tiny lines.

Don't Gear Child to Your Speed

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Some children are slow-moving, some swift as arrows. No amount of home training will make the first like the second, or vice versa.

The persistent and chronic dawdler so often is the child of the speedy and perfectionist-type of parent. She must have everything done on the dot and exactly right.

So, from infancy, the child is hustled at an artificial pace that pleases the parent. "Hurry, hurry," is the order of the day.

Reverse Reaction

It is easy to imagine the effect this will have on the child who feels a growing resentment that his own personality is becoming overridden by the parent. To be slower and slower, becomes an absolute necessity, so that his own distinction shall not be lost in the shuffle.

By the time the child is of school age, his resentment against being prodded into speediness, will lead to real difficulties. The mother will find it harder and harder to get the child up for school or into his clothes or finished with his breakfast. The whole pattern of early morning will be an angry, aggravated one, induced by the parent's irritation at the child's pokiness.

There has to be an end to this foolishness, even if the mother is the only one to make any change. Parents should recognize that a child is a personality, that he has his own timing, and that this cannot be forcibly changed.

Put Him On His Own

If he is so slow that it seems he will never get to school on time, try seeing what would happen when he is put on his own. The parent can see that breakfast is on time, that he gets up early, that clothes are laid out in convenient pattern for quick dressing. But, she should not make herself an alarm clock for the child and warn him repeatedly that he has to hurry, that he must get a hustle on and finally give that frenzied shriek which apprises him that he'll really have to run.

There will come a time when any child will recognize there are penalties to dawdling which he does not want to pay. The sooner his mother allows him to come to that recognition, the sooner he will set his pace to meet his own obligations.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man, 28, Orders Wife From Room and Slaps 10-Months-Old Baby Black and Blue Because Her Crying Irritates Him; Wife Is Frantic

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We have been married four years. My husband is 28 and I am 23. We have a baby daughter 10 months old. Our life together was very happy until this last year, since the baby was born.

My husband has absolutely no patience with her. If she cries before going to sleep he immediately spanks her—hard. Recently he stood over her crib and each time she cried he would hit her. He ordered me out of the room. Next morning her legs and thighs were bruised black and blue.

This situation has me nearly crazy and the baby is very nervous and afraid of her father. I don't know what to do because I love my husband and baby equally and am torn between them. I don't want to leave my husband, because I love him; but I am beginning to worry about our daughter's future.

I am wondering which prospect is worse for her,—to be reared without a father? Or to grow up fearing and disliking him? Any advice you can give me will be greatly appreciated. Sincerely,

E. D.

Man Is Savagely Jealous of Baby

DEAR E. D.: Your husband's abuse of this helpless infant is dreadful, cruel, moronic. It isn't a case of his having absolutely no patience with her. Rather it signifies childish, blackhearted jealousy of your maternal devotion to her.

A human infant is one of the most helpless creatures born into this world. His hold on life is precarious and uncertain to start. He must of necessity have watchful, warmhearted mothering from birth through his first two years if he is to hang on and gradually build up physical, nervous and mental stamina sufficient to give him an average chance at normal growth.

Your child, God help her, needs abundant loving-kindness as much as she needs food, sleep and oxygen in order to survive at all. And you, not being a monster, are instinctively primed to give such care to her.

Man Is Problem Child Himself

HOWEVER, your husband is himself so infantile in character that he savagely—almost insanely—resents the baby's legitimate claims to mother nurture and feels blindly jealous when you turn toward her with affectional solicitude to give the sustenance, comfort or reassurance her welfare requires.

That's why he is slapping his 10-months-old daughter black and blue. He is literally beating her up for diverting some of your time and attention from him and, incidentally, with sadistic venom, punishing you for having (as it were) another love interest.

Such savagery is occasionally observed in erstwhile "only" children who, at the age of 3, 4 or 5, are obliged to make way for a new baby in mother's arms. They have been known to make attempts on the life of the infant—motivated by resentful intent to eliminate a rival—and perhaps subconsciously your husband's purpose is equally dire.

Has He Got Sense Enough to Reform?

THIS is a shocking thought, I grant; but no more shocking than his abuse of the baby. There is only one chance of deeply correcting his attitude. If he has enough sense and vestigial character to face the truth about himself and undertake the painful struggle to grow up psychologically at this late date, your marriage might be saved and your child insured humane care in a two-parent home.

I'm not at all sure he will see the light and exert himself to become a man. If he doesn't, he is worse than worthless in the father-role,—in fact, a ruthless saboteur of your child's welfare. The terror, the flogging, he has already inflicted are sufficient to precipitate psychotic disorder sooner or later,—and the only sure antidote is to give her a consistent experience of tender devotion, beginning now.

Thus the choice as I see it is (1) for him to reform on his knees, taking for guidance Dr. Margaret Ribble's book, "The Rights of Infants," published by Columbia University Press; or (2) for you to leave him forthwith and gain legal full custody of the child. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Post.

Raleigh Got the Credit

Traditionally Sir Walter Raleigh is said to have brought back the potato from Virginia in 1585. However, later investigations say it appears that the true potato did not reach Virginia until more than 100 years after this date.

"I just love to watch things grow . . . you know, Alexander oughta be tall enough to date by September!"

Pack Up and Perk Up—It's Vacation Time

NOW it is vacation time, and if you are dreading the packing and getting ready for that precious change of pace and the consequent drain on your energy that vacation preparations bring about, here is how to avoid useless waste of energy.

There is no need for packing and traveling to be an ordeal, says Ann Delafield, beauty expert. Make these preparations work for you. You cannot only practice posture exercises in your mad rush, but you can do all your tasks and still feel fresh and ready to go, says Miss Delafield, provided you plan and organize your packing, work with proper posture and know how to offset the packing tension.

Decide exactly what you are taking with you and get everything in one place to avoid unnecessary steps while you are packing. If it is a suitcase, put it on a chair or a table of comfortable height to avoid stooping. Now, take 60 seconds to back up against the wall or the side of a doorway, feet 4 inches from it. Bend your knees and separate them, but keep your heels on the floor. Bring the end of your spine away from the wall and push your waistline against the wall. Push it against the wall hard! Hold it while you count 60 slowly. Now, walk over to your packing job; hold that perfect posture and don't slump. You'll find the work less tiring.

Trunks, too, require packing and posture tricks, says Miss Delafield. If it is a wardrobe trunk you are packing, simply lift out the bottom drawers and pack them on a chair or the bed, so that you are not stooped over.

If it is a box trunk or a steamer trunk, never bend over to lay things in the bottom part. Either kneel or squat on your heels, keeping your spine straight in either case. Then again pack the tray on the bed.

Many travelers can take the packing in their stride, but it is the traveling that takes the joy out of the vacation. Part of this exhaustion comes from lugging luggage, says Miss Delafield, and this exhaustion is entirely unnecessary. The weight you are carrying is not what is tiring, but rather the way you carry it. Instead of one very heavy suitcase weighing one side of you down, take two for your posture's sake. This way you will divide the weight as evenly as possible, making luggage toting not only less tiring, but better for your figure. Keep your knees relaxed as you walk, and your back straight. Do not accommodate the weight you are carrying.

Remember when you pick up your luggage again after rests in between transportation waits that you must bend your knees deeply as you lift the suitcases and then slowly rise, lifting your spine in a straight line from behind your ears, says Miss Delafield.

Happy landings!

C. & P. Will Spend $2,880,000 To Improve Virginia Service

By The Associated Press

Expenditures amounting to approximately $2,880,000 for the construction and expansion of telephone facilities throughout Virginia were approved yesterday by the board of directors of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. of Virginia in Richmond.

The action of the board brought the total authorized to date for expenditures this year to $21,199,000. Of the approved expenditures, $1,953,000 will be spent for routine construction and for replacement and removal of telephone plants in the State during the third quarter of 1947.

Authorized by the directors was a $184,900 improvement program involving the installation of additional equipment in the Chestnut dial center in Arlington. The expanded facilities will provide 1600 additional subscribers lines when installation is completed.

$182,000 for Alexandria

In the Alexandria area, the board approved expenditures of more than $182,000 for additional underground and aerial cable facilities. Five miles of aerial cable, three miles of underground cable and one mile of conduit will be placed to take care of growth in the section south of Hunting Creek.

More than $132,000 was allotted for the provision of additional outside plant for rural service in the Jonesville area and cable relief in the community. The project involves the placing of 1170 poles, 22 miles of aerial cable and 233 single miles of wire.

Proposed expansion of dial and toll facilities in Lee Hall and Bedford brought approval by the directors of expenditures totaling $109,500.

Lynchburg Expansion Authorized

More than $91,000 was authorized to expand subscriber cable in the Rivermont and Peakland sections of the Lynchburg central office area. Nearly four miles of underground cable and 4.5 miles of aerial cable will be placed.

Small appropriations authorized by the directors included $8400 for additional dial equipment at Shawsville and $7600 for expansion of cable facilities along Paper Mill Road in the Winchester area.

The total expenditures approved by the directors are part of the company's 60-million-dollar expansion and improvement program now under way throughout the State.

Trucker Held After Collision In Va. Hurts 4

Warrenton, Va., June 30 (Spl.)—Robert Utterback, 28, of Warrenton, was charged with parking on a highway with improper lights and being under the influence of intoxicants today as the result of a Saturday night collision in which four persons were injured.

According to State Trooper L. W. Wetsel, a 1941 Packard sedan operated by Erwin K. Young, of 2708 30th st. se., Washington, D. C., crashed into the rear of a dump truck. The truck was said to be operated by Utterback for the North Wales Stud Farm, nine miles southwest of Warrenton on Route 15.

The most seriously injured was Prof. G. W. McCuen of Ohio State University, whose left eye was removed at Physicians' Hospital here. He also suffered bruises and abrasions of the right shoulder and face lacerations.

His wife sustained fractures of both legs, right wrist and abrasions of the face. Both are still at the hospital.

Young was treated for face abrasions and Mrs. Young for a lacerated lip and facial cuts. Both were discharged after treatment.

Fairfax Hearing On Power Line Set Tomorrow

Protests against proposed construction of 10 miles of high tension lines in Fairfax County will be heard by the county's board of supervisors at its regular meeting tomorrow at 10 a. m.

The protests have been prepared by at least 15 of the property owners whose land would be traversed by the 110,000-volt line to be erected by the Virginia Electric & Power Co.

The 15 landowners contend that the power lines would create a "hazard to the public generally and would impair the value of adjacent property and fender it totally unfit for the much-needed urban development of the area.

Edward S. Holland, Alexandria surveyor employed by four of the owners to study the effects of the proposed power lines, said if the project is deemed necessary by the board of supervisors, his clients would demand it be placed underground.

Armory Gives Employment Office Haven

The Maryland State Employment Service office at Silver Spring, Md., was a homeless waif yesterday until the National Guard Armory provided emergency quarters.

The office had been in the Walsh Building at 8511 Colesville rd., Silver Spring, under a war emergency lease which expired last midnight.

A new lease for the office had been prepared which called for a tripling of the rent. The Board of Public Works of Maryland, which has jurisdiction over all leasing of space for Maryland offices, refused to approve the larger figure.

The board decision was reached Friday but members of the service were not notified until yesterday. They asked the Lomar Motor Co., their landlord, for an extension of a few days but the landlord said he would grant no delay, the office must move before midnight.

Capt. CharlesPeter, commanding the Service Company, Maryland National Guard, agreed to permit use of the armory building and the harassed employment office completed moving yesterday afternoon.

The employment service will be in operation today at the armory building on Wayne ave. just off Georgia ave., Silver Spring. The telephone number, Shepherd 1020, will remain the same, according to S. Gilbert Brown, manager of the office.

O'Conor Denies Ration Charge As 'Malicious'

Baltimore, June 30 (AP).—Charges that he obtained rationed foods without giving up coupons during the war have been declared political and "malicious and false," by former Governor O'Conor.

O'Conor, now Democratic Senator from Maryland, issued the statement in reply to a New York newspaper article quoting a former Maryland militia captain, H. Kirk Schminkley.

Schminkley was quoted as saying he had made weekly purchases of rationed goods from a military commissary during the war under orders from an Annapolis Government House official or from Francis Petrott, wartime commander of the Maryland State Guard.

In Frederick, Petrott acknowledged that the then chief executive had received rationed foods without providing stamps, but that the newspaper story was "grossly inaccurate."

"I personally did not attend to purchasing for the Government House," O'Conor said in his statement, "but I have been assured that everything procured was in accordance with all regulations.

"The publication of the article is undoubtedly inspired by politics and ought not to be dignified by an answer other than to state that moderate quantities of necessary fodstuffs were furnished in strict compliance with regulations."

Petrott said less than half the amount of foodstuffs Schminkley said were purchased without coupons actually were bought for Government House.

"I agree that the Governor, as commander in chief of the military forces of Maryland, was entitled to the same buying privileges accorded other units of the State forces," Petrott said.

D. John Markey of Frederick, O'Conor's Republican opponent in the senatorial election last November, has contested the balloting. O'Conor was elected by slightly more than 2000 votes.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 30 (AP).—C. Charles Cox, 83-year-old retired agent for the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad here, died at his home today. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

He was a past president and was treasurer for many years of the Rotary Club here. The club recently presented him with a plaque for "long, faithful service."

He is survived by his wife.

Baby and Bingo Add to Weekend Tasks of Firemen

Annapolis, Md., June 30 (AP).—Earleigh Heights firemen today looked back on a busy weekend in which they answered three fires and three ambulance calls, revived a woman who fainted when she won a carnival bingo jackpot, and delivered a baby en route to a hospital.

Answering an ambulance call, driver Curtis Chambers and aide William Brockmeyer took Mrs. Bernedda Chisley, 25, to Freedmen's Hospital at Washington. Near Laurel Mrs. Chisley gave birth to a baby, assisted by Brockmeyer.

The firemen extended their carnival through Sunday night. All went well until the windup of the bingo game.

After a tense session, the winner was announced, and the woman fainted. Revived, she was told she would have to split the pot with three others.

Gas Station, Delicatessen Are Robbed

An armed robbery of a gasoline station and cracking of a delicatessen safe netted outlaws in the District a total of $1158 yesterday morning.

The filling station robber apparently arrived and left on foot. Whoever robbed the delicatessen safe snipped two door locks, broke a safety latch, and then wrenched off the hinges of the safe, depositing its door on the floor but reportedly not disturbing the sleep of the store owner, who lives upstairs.

George Easterday, 34, of 1253 6th st. sw., night manager of a filling station at 701 Maine ave. sw., told police he was confronted by a man with a .32 nickel-plated revolver as he stepped out of a back room into the office at 12:45 a. m.

He said the man, a Negro between 30 and 40 years old and weighing about 170 pounds, forced him to turn over the $142 in the cash register and about $460 from a small safe.

The holdup man tried to get Easterday to open a larger safe, but the manager told him he didn't know the combination.

The man put the cash into a light tan canvas bag from the safe, Easterday said, told him to stay in the back room for 10 minutes, and disappeared. The manager did not hear an automobile motor before or after the holdup, he told police.

About $556 in bills and change was taken from a safe in Nell's Delicatessen, 1606 14th st. nw., early in the morning, Melvin Schecter, 30, owner, told police. The thief or thieves, who forced the rear door, left about $62 in change in the safe and on the floor, Schecter estimated.

Schecter, who lives above the delicatessen, said he did not discover the theft until 6:45 a.m.

Distillers Urged To Reduce Corn Consumption

The Agriculture Department appealed last night to distillers to use less corn until more definite information is available on the extent of flood and wet-weather damage to the corn crop.

This request was made a few hours before a wartime order prohibiting use of wheat to distillers, brewers and feed mixers expired at midnight June 30. This order was issued under the Second War Powers Act which expired at the same time.

The department said it is possible that the Government may be able later to offer distillers surplus potatoes for making beverage spirits as it did last year. It added that available information indicates distillers already have substantially reduced their use of corn.

Bainbridge Naval Center Closed Down

Bainbridge, Md., June 30 (AP).—The final contingent of 400 Navy "boots" left the naval recruit training center here this morning, as the center shut down for lack of congressional appropriations.

The trainees, most of whom had been in the Navy from 17 to 20 weeks, will report to the Fifth Naval District, Norfolk, Va., for assignment to the U. S. S. Butner, a transport belonging to the Pacific Fleet.

The recruits came from various States throughout the Eastern seaboard.

At its peak the Bainbridge center trained 35,000 men at a time. The shut-down process began as early as May 1.

Capt. John J. O'Donnell, jr., commandant of the center, said the grounds will be placed in caretaker status, and will be manned by 250 men during the summer.

The Naval Preparatory School, which prepares enlisted men for the Naval Academy entrance examinations, will continue in operation on the grounds.

County Acts May Get Test At Md. Polls

Annapolis, Md., June 30 (AP).—Three county acts passed by the 1947 Legislature and signed by Governor Lane apparently were slated for a referendum test at next year's election.

Two of the acts concerned Cumberland County. One would authorize the use of voting machines and the other permit the county commissioners to borrow money to pay for them.

The third act in question is one for Anne Arundel County which would set up a county manager governmental system.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Post of Cumberland brought the 18 papers containing 847 signatures to the secretary of state's office today calling for the Alleghany County referenda.

The Anpe Arundel County petitions were brought in by Adolph F. Nethan and Fred W. Krethes, both of Glen Burnie. These consisted of 36 lists with 750 names.

In both cases, the petitioners had well over the number of required signatures. The Allegany County group needed a total of 2327 signatures for each measure and 1766 have been filed for each. The Anne Arundel countians needed 1916 signatures. They had brought 1429 on earlier lists.

Attorney General Hall Hammond had notified the county commissioners in both cases that the acts were being questioned, so the measures did not go into effect as of June 1 as did most of Maryland's new laws.

Rehearing Asked On HamptonRoads Ferry Decision

Richmond, Va., June 30 (AP).—The Chesapeake Ferry Co. called on the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals today for a rehearing of the court's opinion on June 9 awarding the Commonwealth all the profits, except "a fair rental fee," from the Hampton Roads Ferry System, which it has operated since February, 1946.

In its petition the ferry company sharply criticized the court for allowing "possible results and consequences of its decision" influence its judgment.

The ferry system was seized by the State in February, 1946, after it had been out of operation for three weeks because of a strike. The Commonwealth has retained control ever since.

1000 Fairfax Homesteads Get DDT Bath

One thousand Fairfax County homesteads have been sprayed with DDT in the last 10 days in an attempt to rid the county of its annual scourge—the Japanese beetle.

County Agent Joseph Beard admitted that progress had been slower than had been hoped. He laid it to lack of experience in such a county-wide operation and last week's rain, which held up spraying for two days.

He said there were at least 200 square miles of residential area in the county that should be sprayed. Additional spraying machines have been added. It is hoped that all residents who request the sprayings can be served within the next two weeks, he said.

A Washington firm and several local residents have agreed to spray for $3 a spraying for the average half-acre homestead. Beard has urged at least two sprayings two weeks apart.

He said that those wanting their homes sprayed could contact the men direct. Those who he knew to be available are: Patterson Sales Corp., Washington: W. P. Anderson, and Lawrence Wescott, both of Falls Church; R. E. Chilcott, Vienna, and O. V. Carper, McLean.

Effects of Labor Bill Fight Far-Reaching

By Drew Pearson

"The District Line" by Bill Gold is being suspended during Bill's vacation.

The fight over President Truman's labor-bill veto will go down in history as one of the most important of his career. It will also be cited by labor and business leaders both for and against Congressmen in every district in future elections from coast to coast. It is already being scrutinized by foreign governments and political groups abroad.

For this reason, a post-mortem on what happened backstage may be important.

So far it hasn't leaked out, but Secretary of State Marshall tipped the scales to get President Truman to veto the bill. Hitherto Marshall has kept hands off domestic matters.

At the first meeting of the Cabinet, June 6, only Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach urged the veto. Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman, on the other hand, submitted a strongly worded statement urging Truman to sign. Secretary of the Treasury Snyder supported him.

Harriman It was at the second Cabinet meeting, June 13, that Secretary Marshall entered the discussion. At first he wanted to keep out, but decided that what happened on the United States domestic front vitally affected the foreign-affairs front. Therefore, he advised President Truman to veto the bill.

Marshall argued that if the President joined the Republicans by signing the measure, his action would alienate the liberal and Socialist elements in Europe, among whom the United States is trying to gain influence and prestige.

Marshall was following the recommendation of his chief policy-planner, George Kennan, who spent many years in Moscow and now heads the Army War College-State Department strategy board to chart United States policy toward Russia. It is Kennan's recommendation that the United States not swing too far to the right, but follow a middle-of-the-road course, thus proving that it will work with Socialist groups in Europe.

Marshall expounded this philosophy at the Cabinet meeting, urging that Europe's middle-of-the road groups should not be alienated by any antilabor act by President Truman.

Secretary of the Interior Krug strongly supported Marshall, and it became apparent at this Cabinet meeting that Truman would definitely veto.

Democratic Strategy

Meanwhile, another strategy conference was being held inside the Democratic National Committee leaders on the idea that a presidential veto, if overridden by Congress, would be best for the party. By vetoing the bill Truman would become the hero of labor, Hatch argued. But if the veto was overridden, Truman would likewise get badly needed legislation to correct labor abuses.

Democratic National Committee leaders polled all commitee members plus 48 State chairmen. Two thirds favored both veto and Senate support for the veto. Only the Southern States were opposed. On Thursday, June 19, the day before the White House released the veto message, Senator Pepper of Florida sat down with Senator Barkley of Kentucky, Democratic policy chairman Leslie Biffle, and "Skeeter" Johnson, minority clerk, to decide whether Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah should be summoned back from Switzerland to vote. It was agreed that Skeeter Johnson should telephone Thomas.

However, Johnson never did. Instead, he and Biffle tried to work out a pair with a Republican Senator. Both Senators Capeheart of Indiana and McCarthy of Wisconsin were willing to be paired with Thomas. They thought this was only fair since he was in Geneva on official business.

Thomas Hesitates

But Senators Wherry of Nebraska and Taft of Ohio refused. By that time they were certain Thomas would not fly back.

This question of whether Thomas would or would not fly back from the International Labor Conference in Geneva figured largely in the remainder of the veto fight.

Senator Pepper was determined to delay a vote until Thomas could get back.

Finally on Saturday afternoon Pepper discovered that, despite previous promises, no one had telephoned Senator Thomas. Pepper concluded that Gael Sullivan, director of the Democratic National Committee, had been kidding him when he said that a Constellation was available to fly Thomas back.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

The Bridge Deck

By Florence Osborn

South was doubled at five hearts in today's hand and went down six tricks, a loss of 1,700 points. Sadly his opponents would have gone down at five diamonds.

Today's Hand

North-South Vulnerable

EAST DEALER

	♠ K 7 5 3 ♡ 10 5 ◇ Q J 3 ♣ 10 9 5 2
♠ 10 ♡ Q 8 2 ◇ K 9 7 5 4 ♣ A Q 4 3		♠ A Q 8 6 4 ♡ 6 4 ◇ A 10 8 6 3 ♣ 6
	♠ J 9 2 ♡ A K J 9 7 3 ◇ None ♣ K J 8 7

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	2 ♡	3 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	4 ♡	Pass	Pass
5 ◇	5 ♡	Dble	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 10 ♠.

West should have doubled four hearts, but didn't. So East went to five diamonds, afraid four hearts would make—some chance! South now decided that five diamonds was in, and that he shouldn't be hurt much at hearts and was doubled.

West opened his singleton spade, small from the board and East took the queen and laid down the ace. On the play of the ace West discarded his lowest diamond, asking his partner to lead him a club.

East shifted to his singleton club, South put up his king, and West cashed the ace and queen, and continued a third club for his partner to ruff. East next returned a spade and West ruffed and led another club which East ruffed.

The opponents now had seven tricks and on a spade return by East, declarer could not avoid losing another trick to West's heart queen. If he trumped the spade lead with the heart jack, West would overruff with the queen. If he trumped with the king to prevent an overruff, West's heart queen would become established.

South went down six tricks at five hearts, doubled, losing two spades and a spade ruff two clubs and two club ruffs and the queen of hearts. Declarer managed to take five heart tricks.

At five diamonds West would go down one trick, losing two hearts and one diamond.

July Is Here

July is here with all its warmth . . . And all its time for fun . . . When people take vacations and . . . Enjoy the summer sun . . . The month in which to fish and swim . . . And picnic by the beach . . . Where all the worries of the world . . . Are safely out of reach . . . It is the proper period . . . To rest and to relax . . . And put aside the problems of . . . Success and income tax . . . July is properly the month . . . In which to dream and roam . . . And seek a change of scenery . . . From office and from home . . . Because the sky is beautiful . . . The weather is sublime . . . And just because July reflects . . . The heart of summertime.

Only 3 more shopping days left this week! . . . Store closed Friday and Saturday!
